GIRL HELD WITH SPOONING GUNMAN

DESPERADO REFUSED BAIL BY COURT

Miss Doyle Swoons as She Is Accused as an Accessory to the Shooting

Earl Phillips "Tug" Wilson, nineteen-year-old "spooning gunman," was arrested after a chase, at a Jackson street, North Cambridge, lodging house today, arraigned in Cambridge Court charged with assault with intent to murder Patrolman Francis J. Philbrick of the Metropolitan police in Arlington when the officer interrupted an auto petting party, and held without bail at the special request of District Attorney Saltonstall.

Nineteen-year-old Sarah Frances Doyle of Medford, employed at an ice cream parlor in Somerville, arrested after the shooting, fainted when she was held as an accessory before and after the assault and committed to jail in default of $5,000 bail. She was carried unconscious from the court room.

Gil Crosby, twenty-one years old, said to be a member of the notorious Egan gang of North Cambridge, who was arrested with Wilson, was held in $10,000 bail for hearing April 24 as an accessory after the shooting.

Crosby, according to District Attorney Saltonstall, is also wanted by the Boston police and other cities on various charges.

SPECIAL SESSION.

District Attorney Saltonstall today called a special session of the Middlesex Grand Jury for Friday to probe the shooting of Patrolman Philbrick by Wilson, and the activities of gunmen responsible for a crime wave in Middlesex County.

Startling new evidence is going to be put before the Grand Jury, it was said today and action prompting wholesale arrests in a cleanup of all gunmen and thugs.

As the police trial for Wilson and two others arrested with him is not scheduled before April 24 the action of the District Attorney will probably precipitate action that will affect that hearing.

It is admitted that crime has increased alarmingly throughout the county and that cases where guns figure have run into the hundreds.

It was also stated at the district attorney's office that it has been discovered that the gunmen gang of which Wilson was a member has in its grasp many beautiful young girls in constant fear of death if they fail to heed the command of a member.

"Love nests" are said to be plenty where men harbor these young women, only to cast them aside when weary of them.

Before his arraignment Wilson was positively identified, according to the police, by John Murphy of No. 53 Victoria street, Somerville, as the holdup man who on February 21 last held him up and took $3,300 in cash and checks, the property of the Somerville Trust Company.

It was also declared that Wilson is wanted on an indictment charging him with the brutal beating and robbery of seventy-seven-year-old John

Medford Girl Held in Police Shooting

Swoons in Court When She is Accused of Being an Accessory

"Sally" Doyle seemed to live in fear of Earl "Tug" Wilson, the "spooning" gunman, her friends declare. Wilson, whom she knew as Earl Phillips, went to Europe for a month and the girl seemed to regain her gay spirits again. Two weeks ago Wilson returned and again his influence over "Sally" became evident. Although warned by friends that Wilson was a bad man, she couldn't make herself believe the attacks on his character.

Delivery Men Testify to Taking Choice Roses to Judge's Residence

Testimony that best quality, long-stemmed roses, firewood and vegetables were delivered to the home of the justice was given by two witnesses today when the hearing on a petition for the removal of Supreme Court Justice Edward P. Pierce was opened in Room 436 at the State House.

Many of the roses were delivered during the great shortage of high-priced flowers in the years of 1917 and 1918, it was stated.

This testimony was given by Arthur Ranney and Charles J. Jordan, delivery men employed by the Waban Rose Conservatories, in fixing the control of which Justice Pierce is alleged to have used his influence as a jurist.

Jordan proved the star witness of the day. He was questioned at great length by Attorney George M. Poland, one of the petitioners.

He said he had delivered roses, wood and vegetables both at the justice's home in Brookline and his city residence in Stoneholm court, off Beacon street.

Twice he said the roses were in big baskets. As a rule, though, they were in boxes. There were never less than twelve in a box.

VEGETABLES, TOO.

"They were always the best on the market," testified Jordan. "They were long-stemmed and of different colors. Once Pierce was present when I left a box of roses at his home.

"I usually made the deliveries once a week. There was a period though when I made two deliveries a week. This was during the big flower shortage in 1917 and 1918. That was the year we didn't throw any flowers away at all. They were very scarce.

"I remember once delivering vegetables to the Pierce home. I recall there were two bushels of potatoes in the load. Another time I delivered a box of roses at a church for a funeral. It was a box sent in Judge Pierce's name.

"I seldom saw the roses packed—they were usually ready for me to deliver. They were packed by Mr. Harding, the manager of the conservatories. Harding used to write the judge's name on the boxes.

"There were never less than a dozen in a box. Sometimes there were more. I continued making the deliveries weekly until the time the company went into the hands of the receiver.

"I remember delivering wood to

COOLIDGE ATTACKED IN SENATE

Charged With Recognizing Republicans in Preference to Democrats

By International News Service.

Washington, April 10.—Lashing out at Vice-President Coolidge in the Senate today, Senator Caraway, Democrat, of Arkansas, accused him of showing partiality to Republican senators in recognizing them in preference to senators on the Democratic side.

Caraway charged Coolidge had kept him standing for half an hour while a dozen or more Republican senators were recognized.

When Caraway was recognized by Coolidge, he offered a resolution calling on President Harding for information as to "how many honorably discharged sailors and soldiers have been demoted, dropped and discharged from the government service," since March 1.

The resolution was buried under a storm of objections from the Republican sides when Caraway asked for unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Caraway tried vainly to make himself heard above the din and confusion: "I ask for unanimous consent that the Senator from Arkansas be allowed to make a statement regarding his resolution," demanded Senator King, Democrat of Utah.

Another outburst of objections forced Caraway to take his seat. The resolution automatically went over until tomorrow under Senate rules.

MUST BUY POLICEMAN COAT OR GO TO JAIL

It will cost Edward Dignan of Harvard square, Charlestown, $20 to furnish Patrolman John Lynch a new coat, torn in a melee with the officer, or three months in the House of Correction, according to the judge's decision in Charlestown Court today. He was charged with assault and drunkenness. The sentence was suspended for one year that he may pay for the coat. On the drunkenness charge he was fined $5.

GUNS USED IN RIOT AT NASHUA

Officers and Mill Pickets Suffer Casualties After Mob Frees Prisoner

Nashua, N. H., April 10.—Five hundred textile strikers joined battle with a number of police officers and employers' representatives in front of the Nashua Mills here today and, disregarding a number of shots which the officers fired, effected rescue of one of their number who had been arrested.

Stones were thrown by the striking workmen, while the officers, in addition to firing their revolvers, used their sticks freely.

A number of the strikers suffered with bloody heads but none were hurt badly enough to go to a hospital. Several of the officers also received minor scratches and bruises.

ARREST IS MADE.

Although the policemen were unable to rearrest the man the strikers had taken from them, they finally seized one of the men, named William Tsankis, and held him on charges of inciting to riot.

The trouble started in front of the mill employment office, when a striking picket had a verbal battle with Chester McKinley, son of the mill paymaster.

McKinley was standing in front of the office in Factory street. The picket leaned toward him, shouting an insult.

McKinley vaulted over the low railing in front of the doorway and grappled with the picket. Then he called on the police to place the man under arrest.

Officers Miller and Murray sprang forward. At the same moment a number of strikers leaped to their comrade's assistance.

The picket was arrested, only to be rescued by the strikers a moment later. He broke through the crowd and fled down the street, with a number of bullets from the officers' revolvers whizzing past him.

None of the bullets took effect. But the officers, reinforced by a number of other bluecoats, spread their clubs and proceeded to do battle with the strikers. The latter sent stones and sticks hurtling through the air.

The encounter was brief, but spirited. The strikers were finally dispersed, leaving Unaskis in the hands of the police.

Unaskis was held in $500 for trial Saturday. The police claim he induced the strikers to rescue the first prisoner.

Lawrence Striker Gets Term in Jail

Lawrence, April 10—Judge J. J. Mahoney in Lawrence Court today imposed the first jail sentence upon a textile striker since the outbreak of the strike. George Espanos, charged with assault and battery upon Vincenzo Laron, father of six children, was sent to jail for two months today.

Espanos was defended by J. P. S. Mahoney, attorney for the One Big Union, Who attempted to prove Laron was carrying a revolver when attacked.

In the same court, Alice Grenda, charged with attacking a woman worker at the Pacific Mills, was fined $10, which she paid.

New York, April 10.—About 880,000 shares were traded in during the first half of today's session on the stock exchange, indicating the continuance of the recent high pressure in the securities market.

Irregularity in early dealings, due to further selling for profits, was almost entirely overcome by midday. Rails were the strongest features.

Bonds were active and strong, with a further large turnover in the Liberty series, reflecting an extension of investment demand.

GUIDE'S SISTER A WITNESS FOR MRS. STILLMAN

Called to Refute Banker's Charges Against Wife and Beauvais

Montreal, April 10. (By the Associated Press)—Mrs. Margaret Stacey, sister of Fred Beauvais, Indian guide named as co-respondent in the suit of James A. Stillman to divorce Mrs. Anne U. Stillman, was the first witness called by the defence when the trial of the case shifted today to Montreal.

Mrs. Stacey lives on the Indian reservation at Caughnawagh, near Montreal, and in 1915 was employed as a servant at the Stillman Summer camp near Grande Anse, Quebec.

She was summoned to swear, it was said, that during the Summer of 1918, when Mrs. Stillman was at the camp, she saw no improper conduct between her mistress and her brother. Mr. Stillman charged that his wife misconducted herself with Beauvais at that time, and several Canadians supported his allegations.

The guide's sister was followed to the stand by Herne Marchand, bookkeeper for the company which operates boats along the valley of the St. Lawrence, where Mrs. Stillman was a visitor in 1916, 1918 and 1919. His testimony was contradictory to that of witnesses previously called by Mr. Stillman's lawyer, who gave dates upon which they said Mrs. Stillman went by boat from one camp to another during the Summer of 1918.

ADMITS EDISON HAS NEGLECTED SOUTH END

Spent Millions Buying Small Companies, but Left Sections of City Undeveloped

Superintendent of Research Richard S. Hale today admitted that, while the Edison Electric Illuminating Company has spent millions of dollars in buying up small companies in the suburban towns, it has allowed great districts like the South End to remain undeveloped for years.

He admitted that the South End and other large sections of Boston proper which are NOW without adequate facilities for lighting the homes by electricity have great potential possibilities because they are thickly settled and are close to the Edison's distribution centres.

"The Edison has allowed great waste in failing to develop those districts," declared Attorney Grenville S. MacFarland, who examined Hale at today's hearing before the State Department of Public Utilities in the fight for lower rates being conducted by the Boston American and the City of Boston.

"Isn't your A rate, which would be charged those new customers for lighting their homes, high enough to permit decreases in order to get the new business?"

"If we made the 10-cent rate 8 cents, we would get more business," said Hale, "but it would be hard to tell if the income would be greater."

"You claim," said MacFarland, "that your rates are based on a competitive basis and an experimental basis. Wasn't it worth while to make the experiment?"

"It doesn't always work out that way," said Hale.

"Well, they tried it in Cincinnati and that is just the way it worked out," said MacFarland.

"If that is so, it might change my mind," replied Hale.

Hale said the Edison has inaugurated the system in the South End of paying for the installation of the wires in new customers' homes, the customers to pay for the cost of installation if they were satisfied with electric lighting at the end of a month.

"How long ago did you start that system?" said Mr. MacFarland.

"About six weeks ago," said Mr. Hale.

"After these hearings started, wasn't it?" said Mr. MacFarland.

"Yes," replied Mr. Hale.

PLEADS FOR BAY STATE NAUTICAL TRAINING SHIP

Gov Declares Massachusetts Should Train Men for Merchant Marine

Emphatic protest against the movement to abolish the Massachusetts Nautical Training School, from whose ranks have graduated hundreds of sturdy seafarers who have sailed Bay State ships into every port in the world, was made today to the Committee on State Administration by Charles H. Gow of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Gow declared that from the earliest history of Massachusetts its growth and prominence have always been associated with its maritime commerce. To abandon the training of worthy seamen would be to depart from the best there is in the State's history, he said.

He also said that there is every indication that the national government will embark upon the policy of providing a subsidy for development of the American merchant marine. The State should be ready to have trained men available to take part in the development, he said.

Representative George Pearl Webster, acting chairman of the committee, said to Gow: "There has been a popular approval of the proposition to abolish the school and there is no probability that the committee will report in favor of its abolition."

The disturbers upset the press table, and after causing general consternation among spectators, abruptly withdrew

5,000 RESERVE POLICE CALLED IN NEW YORK

Commissioner Enright Still Maintains That There Is No "Crime Wave"

New York, April 10.—Still maintaining there is no "crime wave," Police Commissioner Enright today issued orders calling 5,000 police reserves for day and night duty and providing for continuous night patrols by automobile squads, motorcycle squads and mounted policemen.

He turned over six of the department's swift motor cars for patrol work and asked reserves who own autos to lend their cars temporarily to aswell the squadrom.

Seventy-five motorcycle men were ordered out for tonight.

GIRL'S MOTHER SEES WARNING IN ARREST

Hopes Plight of Sally Doyle Will Keep Others From Accepting Auto Rides

"Oh, if the plight of my little girl only will serve to warn other girls against the danger of accepting invitations for automobile rides from men they hardly know, I shall not regret the sorrow-filled anguish Sally and I have suffered through this terrible affair."

In these words Mrs. Mary A. Doyle, of No. 7 Wittemore street, Medford, mother of Miss Sarah Frances Doyle, the pretty nineteen-year-old girl arrested in the automobile from which Earl Phillips "Tug" Wilson fled after shooting Patrolman Francis J. Philbrick of the Metropolitan police, told today of her confident belief in the purity of girls.

Mrs. Doyle declared that "nothing the police can say or do will shake the confidence I have in my baby girl."

William Doyle, brother of the young woman, is endeavoring to give the affair, especially at the decision of the Cambridge Court to hold his sister as accessory to the murder before and after the shooting. He announced his intention of seeing District Attorney Saltonstall in an effort to get the bail reduced.

"IS A HOME GIRL."

"We can't raise the $5,000 the court has fixed for her bail, and unless the district attorney will agree to lower it Sarah will have to stay in jail until after her hearing," said Mrs. Doyle.

"That would be an inhuman thing to do. I realize that the girl has become entangled in the snarl of the law, and that the officials are doing their duty, but she has never been arrested before. She is a good, clean girl—a home girl. We can raise lower bail, but not this big sum.

"I cannot understand why District Attorney Saltonstall insisted upon having Sarah held, or why he accused her of being an accessory before and after the shooting. That sounds silly to me.

"I am confident that the officials will be disappointed if they expect to gain further information regarding Wilson from Sarah. The girl has told everything she knows about him.

TOO READY TO ACCEPT.

"She never has been intimate with him—she is intimate with no young man of that class. She merely came to know him through her work. A most unfortunate that she ever met him.

"The great trouble with my girl as it is with so many other young girls of today is that she is far too ready to accept an invitation to take rides from men who are comparative strangers to her.

"If this plight of her's will save others——"

The mother broke down here and wept freely.

"Our pain may save pain to some other girl and mother," she said at last, drying her eyes.

"I can't imagine why Sarah tried to conceal this man's name. She might have been frightened of him—though I don't think so, for he always behaved nicely while with her so far as I know.

"She has known him only three months and in all that time he never has visited her here at home. Of course we heard from time to time that the man was hoiling for him, but Sarah refused to believe those stories. She is too big hearted. She is too loyal in her confidence in her friends.

PLAINCLOTHES MAN.

"We should have known there was something wrong, however, though," the mother went on, "Some time ago a plainclothes man went to Sarah's place of work and got acquainted with her. She went auto riding with him several times. He then came here to see her once to see her.

"It was here that I got suspicious, when I found him snooping around and listening to telephone conversations and from behind the cracks of doors. I told Sarah and she told him not to come back any more.

"Then a couple of days after that this same policeman and another officer had none of the front door and when Sarah and a young man came home the two officers jumped out and grabbed the young man. He had some trouble proving that he was not Wilson.

"Even that did not persuade Sarah that Wilson was wanted by the officers, or that he was guilty of the things they charged against him. I know she has no guilty knowledge of any of the man's secrets. The police will get nothing from her."

STOP SACCO-VANZETTI MEETING IN ARGENTINE

Buenos Aires, April 10.—A public meeting of sympathizers with Sacco and Vanzetti, who are under conviction of murder in Massachusetts, was broken up by the police. Forty arrests were made. No one was in son for a long time. Last week Brief was in Somerville. He enlisted the aid of Miss Doyle. They went out in an automobile looking for Wilson, but did not find him. Later, according to relatives of Miss Doyle, the Charlestown officer held up with a pistol an automobile in which Miss Doyle was returning home with a young man acquaintance. This young man is employed in the office of the State registrar of motor vehicles. The officer, apparently, mistook the man for Wilson.

WILSON, SPOONING GUNMAN, IS CAUGHT ASLEEP IN LODGING HOUSE

E. Parker, a grocer of Hayes square, Charlestown, and other holdups.

The Cambridge Court when the three prisoners were arraigned was a gathering place today for half of the underworld characters of Boston and surrounding communities. Gunmen, bad men, "stick-up" and bandits assembled at the courthouse in large numbers.

To forestall any possible disturbance the police were aided by a detachment of the State Police. Special officers were stationed at the courthouse doors and after the arraignment of the trio, the streets outside the courthouse were doubly guarded as the prisoners were taken back to cells.

The police refused to discuss the report that they are investigating the part in the affair played by a young and extremely good-looking young woman with dark blue eyes, a peach-bloom complexion and bloud hair, who is said to have visited a house on Boylston street, Watertown, with Wilson yesterday afternoon.

The capture of Wilson and Crosby, while sensational in the extreme, was marked with ludicrous features. Crosby and his pal were asleep when the police arrived.

Sergeant Mullaney of the Cambridge police who made the arrest had with him Patrolmen Febry, Gemmer, O'Connell and Timothy Harney. Two of the patrolmen had been stationed back and front of the house and the others entered after calling Wiley, the proprietor.

As the officers knocked on the door of the room occupied by Wilson and Crosby the two men leaped from their beds into the hallway, both were naked.

Down the hall and back stairs they ran, into the room of another tenant and into the cellar. Here the police were confronted with leveled revolvers and the pair surrendered.

GUNS FOUND.

Taking no chances with the "spooning gunman" and his pal, the officers held them covered with their guns, until blankets were brought from the waiting patrol wagon.

Wrapping their prisoners in these, the officers escorted them to the wagon and through the streets to the North Cambridge station.

In the cellar where the capture was made the police later found two guns, one a heavy automatic and the other a revolver.

After the men had been locked up other officers were sent for their clothing, and they were allowed to dress.

Miss Sarah Doyle, pretty nineteen-year-old Medford girl, who was with Wilson when the shooting occurred, who refused for hours to reveal her own or his name, is completely under the influence of the "spooning gunman," according to the police and her mother.

MYSTERY WOMAN

Her devotion to Wilson is declared by the police to be one of the most remarkable features of the whole affair.

The possibility of another woman in the case came to light when the Watertown police visited the house occupied by a Mrs. Sullivan on Boylston street, Watertown, where Wilson and a mysterious "May," a handsome blond, dined Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Sullivan admitted that "May" had been there, but denied all knowledge of Wilson. She said that "May" had been accompanied by a man known to her as "Eddie Saunders."

The police searched the house and found a blood-stained coat, three other coats and two sweaters, which Mrs. Sullivan declared did not belong to her.

Mrs. Sullivan told the police that "Saunders" Sullivan, her husband, and the girl, May, had left the house immediately after dinner and had not returned. Police guards were left at the house all night to question Sullivan or his friends if they came back, but up to a late hour today none had returned.

Wilson held a strange and uncanny influence over Miss Doyle.

"Sally" Doyle had known the desperado, who escaped from the car after a gun battle with the police, more than three months. She had been cast by the police and friends that Wilson was a "bad man" yet she refused to believe the accusations against him.

FEAR, SAYS EMPLOYER.

After the shooting she spent the entire night in a police cell before she would reveal her name. Such was the love or fear held by this young girl of respectable family for the desperado. At one time she denounced him for leaving her in the lurch during the shooting.

"Sally seemed to live in fear of the man," said Arthur G. Pearson, proprietor of the Winter Hill, Somerville, ice cream parlor, where Miss Doyle was employed. "About a month ago he went away to Europe. Sally seemed to be a changed girl. Her gay spirits returned.

"Then two weeks ago this fellow came back. She met him outside the store. They had a quarrel. Her other Young men friends came to see her but she would have nothing to do with them. She seemed afraid that Wilson might see her talking to them."

"Sally" Doyle is frank about her friendship with Wilson. She said: "I heard things about him but I didn't believe them. People tell all sorts of stories about other people. It's hard to know what is true these days. One thing, I certainly did not know that he had a gun with him. If I had I wouldn't have been in the automobile with him. Another thing I wish to state, I am not married to Wilson."

MOTHER PLAYS WILSON.

"Sally's widowed mother was outspoken in her denunciation of her daughter's companion. "I hope he is captured," she said. "He is a cowardly cur or he wouldn't have run away and left my daughter alone. Sally is a good girl. She is only nineteen."

Miss Doyle was released in $2,000 bonds. She was held in the case as a material witness and was to have appeared in court today. She is at her home, No. 9 Whittemore street, Medford.

Officer Philbrick is resting comfortably at the Symmes Arlington Hospital. A bullet was removed from his right leg. Hospital physicians said Philbrick's chances to recover were good.

According to the police the spooning gunman is wanted by the Cambridge, Charlestown and Lynn police. He has served time, although only twenty-two years old. His picture is in the Boston rogues' gallery.

Wilson is accused of robberies in Charlestown and with beating an old man in that district.

Patrolman George Bird of Station No. 15 had been searching for Wilson for a long time. Last week Bird was in Somerville. He enlisted the aid of Miss Doyle. They went out in an automobile looking for Wilson, but did not find him. Later, according to relatives of Miss Doyle, the Charlestown officer held up with a pistol an automobile in which Miss Doyle was returning home with a young man acquaintance. This young man is employed in the office of the State registrar of motor vehicles. The officer, apparently, mistook the man for Wilson.

Codfish are fond of quahog chowder. A live cod recently caught off Nantucket was found to have two quarts of quahogs in its stomach. It is said that dredging machines crack the shells of quahogs which lie helplessly embedded in the bottom of the sea until the codfish comes along and enjoys a feast. Who's authority for all this is Dr. L. C. Jones of Falmouth, who today communicated his discovery to the State Department of Fish and Game.

'LOTHARIO' GRAFTON WOOED THREE SISTERS AT THE SAME TIME

QUIT WHEN CALLED 'DADDY'

Missing Bigamist Always Attentive to Mothers of Victims, Says One

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

New York, April 10.—Further light was thrown today upon the methods of Joseph Donald Grafton, the missing Pittsburgh bigamist, gay and deft Lothario who broke honeymoons for new marriages and "courted" constantly.

Three of his wives have been found, and the latest revelation is that he paid ardent court to three sisters simultaneously. Paulette Lorayne Grafton, in a statement copyrighted by the Star Company, analyzes Grafton's methods as follows:

"How does Don do it? The sting of my suffering is not so sharp as that of Peggy Davis or Ellen McIntyre. I am better able to analyze the man and his methods than they are.

"In the first place, Don is great on the mother stuff. He took Peggy Davis' mother to live with them. I have heard that he obtained from her a photograph inscribed by her 'to my dear Don.' His motto seems to be 'Get in with the mothers.'

"Another one of Don's methods is his solicitous politeness. He always rises when he meets a lady. When he gets a crush on a girl she can't walk from the Palace Theatre to the Hotel Astor. Don, the gallant caviller, must call a taxicab.

"Don is just as good at getting jobs as he is in getting wives. He has held some jobs in which he drew a salary of $1,000 a week, but he did not seem to hold them long. He seems to get tired of jobs just as he does of women, but he never fails to get another one. I wonder who is kissing him now and thinking he is the greatest thing that was ever born?"

"When after three years, during which he visited me in almost every large city I was playing in, I finally and for the thousandth time told Don that I would not be his wife, that he was too old for me and that I did not love him enough, he told me he would make me jealous.

"To accomplish that purpose he paid court to my elder sister, Nell. It was Nell all along had kept guardian watch over me. I would have been numb had it not been for Nell's wise warnings. So when he sent flowers and candy and told her he was desperately in love with her and wanted her to marry him, Nell became angry and sharply called him down.

"Having failed there, he tried to win my younger sister. But she laughed at him and called him Daddy. That made him so mad he quit."

Westbound traffic was warned to take the crossing at latitude 49:30 after April 15.

MRS. CLARK IS DYING FROM POISON

Daughter Dorothy Summoned From Maine to Mother's Bedside in Hospital

Mrs. Ethel Clark of Brookline, who brought suit for $200,000 against Herbert Rawlinson, the motion picture actor, charging that he had attacked her daughter, Dorothy, is at death's door in the City Hospital today as the result of poison which she took yesterday in an attempt to commit suicide.

The girl, who married Karl Elms last week, had refused to visit her mother at a Boston hospital and this is believed to have caused the woman to leave the hospital to seek the girl.

She wandered about the streets for several hours and finally took the poison near the Relief Station. She was first taken to the Relief Station and later removed to the City Hospital, where her name was placed on the danger list and an attempt was made to communicate with the girl at Lovelaton, Me., where she is believed to have gone with her husband.

At the hospital Mrs. Clark forgave her daughter and Elms for their marriage, but denied that she has withdrawn the suit against Rawlinson.

KEEFE BROTHERS' PLEA UNDER ADVISEMENT

The plea brought by attorneys for the Keefe brothers, seeking to restrain Federal prohibition agents from using a quantity of "Robnettine," a patent medicine concoction containing sherry wine, as evidence, until it has been decided whether the medicine was illegally seized, was today taken under advisement by Judge Anderson in the Federal Court.

Assistant United States Attorney Stone announced that no criminal proceedings would be brought against the Keefe brothers until this question had been settled. Agents seized a considerable quantity of the medicine a short time ago, declaring it an alcoholic beverage in disguise.

MINISTERS IN UPROAR AT REPORT

Attack on Crime, Divorce and Dress in Resolution Stirs Methodist Meeting

The New England Methodist conference meeting in the Centre Methodist Church at Malden was thrown into an uproar today when the report of the "committee on the state of the community" was fought by majority in attendance and branded as "sensational."

The report presented by the Rev. C. H. Rockpole of Stoneham stated in substance that:

"A wave of crime is sweeping over the country, there is a disregard of laws that threaten the whole social structure, shocking crimes are being committed in high society, divorces are multiplying, bootleggers are openly working on land and sea, and women are responding to new freedom by shocking styles in dress and by smoking, all leading with the existence of an army of unemployed and ostentatious luxury among the rich, while the poor are in dire want to the impending downfall of civilization."

Dr. Lemuel H. Murlin, president of Boston University, vigorously opposed the acceptance of the report and demanded that it be modified and all reference to crime struck out.

The Rev. Tobias Moss of Sterling said: "To accept such a report is to impugn the work of the ministers of this conference."

To which the Rev. O. C. Poland of Waltham, member of the committee, shouted: "Evidently the truth isn't wanted if we are going to allow the conference to dictate a committee report."

Objectors forced the report back to be modified and resubmitted.

A resolution requesting that care be used in the nomination of congressional election and demanding the enforcement fully of prohibition brought about another vigorous quarrel which brought in the mention of the famous Quincy House raid, when the Rev. Frank E. Kingdon in replying to critics of the resolution, said:

"When a resolution hits certain people in high places efforts are made to apply whitewash. When men in high places get 'in Dutch,' as was the case in the Quincy House raid, we should not hesitate to condemn."

The resolution was also returned for modification.

Society Disappointed as Morrill Divorce Case Goes Over

MRS. FLORENCE R. MORRILL

A new photograph of defendant in famous divorce hearing. She is expected to attempt to discredit much of the testimony offered by her husband when the taking of testimony is resumed.

Fashionable Throng Troops From Court as Hearing Is Postponed

Leon G. Morrill, wealthy Brookline clubman, today temporarily escaped the expected grilling into kissing and petting parties in his Brookline set when Judge Nelson P. Brown was forced to postpone the famous divorce hearing until April 24. Morrill seemed relieved as he left the Dedham Superior Court.

A crowd of spectators, among them the elite in the Brookline fashionable set, trooped from the courtroom disappointed. They had expected sensational evidence involving the naming of more kisses.

Morrill is suing his beautiful wife, Florence R. Morrill, for divorce. He has named two corespondents, Douglas S. Carter and Seth K. Chase.

Judge Brown announced that postponement was due to additional duties in connection with the regular sitting this week of the County Grand Jury, over which he presides. Efforts to obtain a substitute jurist to preside at the divorce hearing failed, he said.

Other developments in the case today were:

REFUSES TO TESTIFY

Mrs. Sarah Carter, wife of one of the corespondents, now in New York, refused to take the witness stand in Morrill's behalf, it became known today.

Mrs. Carter is not the only witness, it is said, who said she has wanted no part in the Morrill divorce. Flight to Europe of Mrs. Maude Hanley, widow and society woman, and one of those Morrill admitted he kissed, was prompted, friends say, by her frequently expressed desire to "be out of reach when Morrill's divorce case came up."

Refusal of Mrs. Carter, said to be an attractive woman, to testify has it is stated, greatly disturbed friends of Morrill. When Mrs. Carter was asked some time ago if she would appear, she is reported to have declared any testimony she could give would in no way be of any material assistance to either side.

She is declared to have said that the marital difficulties between her and Carter had their inception some time before one ever knew any of the Morrills, although Morrill has testified he visited Mrs. Carter at Beach Bluff and discussed his divorce suit and incidentally the Carters' separation.

Mrs. Carter spent the Winter in Florida, accompanied by a woman friend, and recently returned to New York, where, it is reported, she still is.

TO PROVE ILLNESS.

Other women witnesses soon to appear are Miss Anna Sutherland, former nursemaid at the Morrill's Brookline home. She will appear for plaintiff. Another is Miss Catherine Coyne, employed in the Rockland, Me., Summer home of Mrs. Morrill's parents. She will testify for defendant regarding a visit Morrill made to his wife.

Detectives Lyons and Economy, who, with Morrill smashed in the door panel of the Warwick road Brookline apartment of Mrs. Morrill's mother and found Mrs. Morrill in bed and Seth K. Chase in another part of the house, will be called soon.

Morrill has admitted under cross-examination that he and the detectives saw Chase coming down the reception hall when they made their dramatic entrance. Mrs. Morrill's counsel declare that it will prove that Mrs. Morrill was taken ill at a dinner at the Hotel Somerset and Chase drove her to her mother's apartment.

POISONED GIRL BLAMES RICH CAFE MAN

Says She Tried to End Her Life Because He Broke Their Engagement

June Reynolds, pretty restaurant cashier, recovering from veronal poison at the City Hospital, says that she tried to take her life because a rich man broke off their engagement and snatched away the life of luxury he had introduced to her.

Daniel Grimes, wealthy restaurateur of Manchester, N. H., the man Miss Reynolds accuses, denies her allegations. He says he gave her money to get a new start in life, and merely took a "fatherly interest" in her.

Miss Reynolds declares that if she gets well she plans to sue the restaurant man for heart balm.

The pretty cashier, who was found in a Boston lodging house close to death's door from the poison she had taken, said that she became engaged to Grimes four years ago.

She said Grimes gave her money and showed her how to spend it on beautiful and comfortable things. Three months ago, she said, the restaurateur broke off the engagement and gave her $500 to go away.

Grimes stated the girl had been cashier in one of his restaurants. He first met her in Concord, N. H. Later she went to work in his restaurant at Manchester, N. H.

She tried to commit suicide in Manchester, Grimes said, and he helped her out with money when she recovered. She spent it all, he said, and he gave her another amount, hoping that she would profit by former experiences and that the money would give her a new start in life. That is the last he heard from her, he said.

The date for the new examinations was today set by Civil Service Commissioner Payson Dana. About eighty candidates will take the exams for promotion to lieutenant and more than 200 for promotion to the office of sergeant.

Dana cancelled the old examinations already taken by the men after John J. McMasters, a clerk in the Civil Service Department, confessed that advance copies of the written tests for would-be lieutenants were stolen from a desk in the department and offered for sale.

Dana is said to have received evidence recently that an unnamed "go-between" offered to sell examination papers in advance to the prospective sergeants.

Daugherty Considers Lifting Indictments

Indianapolis, Ind., April 10.—Attorney-General Daugherty, who arrived here from Washington today announced, was declared authoritatively to be considering the dismissal of indictments pending here in Federal Court which some operators have declared made impossible any wage conference to end the coal strike which began April 1.

It could not be learned before Daugherty's arrival whether any new legal action was contemplated in the present suspension of coal mining.

The Attorney-General, however, was expected to confer with local Federal officials in regard to the indictments pending against 225 coal operators, union leaders and others on charges of conspiracy to violate the Sherman anti-trust law.

Denies Public Faces $3 a Ton Coal Raise

New York, April 10.—Philip Murray, vice-president of the United Mines Workers and union leader in anthracite wage negotiations here, today took issue with statements of W. D. Warriner, representing the operators, that the public would have to pay $170,000,000 a year—$3 on each ton of coal—if the strikers were granted their nineteen demands.

Pointing out that the anthracite miners demand an increase equal to 20 per cent. of their present scale, Murray asserted that, on the admission of Warriner that the industry paid under $200,000,000 for labor in 1921, "an increase of 20 per cent. in the labor cost would be only $40,000,000

He countered Warriner's figures with a demand that operators make public other factors than labor which enter into cost of coal to the public.

ARMY MAY TAKE UP BECK DEATH INQUIRY

Reported William J. Burns Will Be Asked to Investigate Oklahoma Slaying

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 10 (By International News Service).—With the body of Lieutenant-Colonel Paul Ward Beck on its way to Washington, the slaying of the pioneer army aviator was a closed chapter today in Oklahoma's history of tragic events.

Unless further evidence is produced, Prosecuting Attorney Forrest Hughes announced there would be no action taken against Judge Jean F. Day, in whose home Beck was slain.

Army officials, however, stated the matter would be laid before the intelligence bureau of the army at Washington. Transcripts of the testimony of Saturday's inquest in which Judge Day was exonerated for the killing are being prepared and will be forwarded to Washington during the week.

It was believed that William J. Burns, head of the United States Secret Service, would be asked to investigate the case, after the army intelligence bureau receives the military report on the inquest. Full military honors were paid Lieutenant-Colonel Beck's body as it started on its journey to the final resting place in Arlington Cemetery.

As the hearse bearing the flag-draped casket pulled out of the station, where hundreds had gathered, army airplanes appeared in the sky overhead. Swooping down nearly to the car tops, the planes scattered flowers upon the train and then sailed above it, furnishing a military escort for the first hundred miles of its journey.

Accompanying the body were Beck's aged mother, Mrs. Rachel Beck; his son, Lieutenant Paul Ward Beck, Jr., and his nephew, Lieutenant John Beck.

He joined with Jordan in saying there never less than twelve roses in a package.

He said that he once delivered roses for the justice at some hotel—he thought it was the Copley Plaza.

The appearance of Attorney Parker, former Attorney-General, as associate counsel for Justice Pierce, a move to have a transcript of all evidence submitted later to the full general court and a report that former District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier would appear as a witness in the case featured the opening of the hearing.

It was announced that hereafter sessions will be from 9:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. until the hearing is ended.

Judge Pierce is charged with having accepted gifts which swayed him to obstruct justice during a litigation of the estates of the Wahan Rose Conservatories and Henry Woods Sons. He is also charged with unduly influencing himself in the disposition of the matter. Gifts comprised roses and firewood.

J. P. MANNING COMPANY EMPLOYES ENTERTAINED

Fifty employes of the J. P. Manning Cigar Company were guests of Joseph S. Simons, general sales representative of the Consolidated Cigar Company, at a luncheon at the Copley-Plaza. The speakers were Mr. Simons, Daniel F. O'Connell, head of the Manning Company cigar department, and F. J. Ross of the Ross Advertising Agency. Manager O'Connell stated that the past four weeks had witnessed a record increase in the company's business. He attributed this increase to the unusual demand for the Mozart cigar just introduced to New England. Mr. Simons spoke on the unusual developments in the manufacture of the many brands manufactured by the Consolidated Cigar Company. He has devoted his entire business career to the tobacco industry, and his knowledge of conditions from field to consumer is invaluable.

SLAYS STEPFATHER TO SAVE MOTHER

South Norwalk, Conn., April 10.—James Wilson was shot and killed by his twenty-year-old stepson, Robert Thompson, early today.

A moment before Wilson had been choking his wife, following an argument between them.

Thompson, who was ill in bed, says he warned his stepfather to cease attacking his mother. The latter broke away and fled to her son's side for protection.

Wilson, according to the stepson's story, rushed after Mrs. Wilson, threatening to kill her, and Thompson took a revolver from beneath his pillow and fired into Wilson's face.

Thompson had his mother notify the police and gave himself up when they arrived.

Flasks for Members of Congress! Probe Is Asked

Washington, April 10.—Congress was asked today to investigate itself and determine if any members are buying "whiskey flasks," "manicure sets," "poker chips," and other non-essentials in the conduct of public business, through the House stationery room.

A resolution asking for such an investigation by a committee of eleven members was introduced by Representative Blanton, Democrat, of Texas.

Blanton's resolution was an echo of the disorderly scene in the House last week, when he voiced his charges from the floor, bringing down a storm of condemnation from other members. Members of the Texas delegation shouted "liar!" at Blanton at that time.

$181,000 SOUTH BOSTON STREET WORK PLANNED

Instead of costing $75,000 to widen Mt. Vernon street extension, otherwise "Mile road," South Boston, Mayor Curley was informed today by the street commissioners that it would take at least $181,000 for the improvement.

Therefore the Mayor has decided money for this work shall be taken out of the appropriation of $50,000 recently passed by the City Council for improvement of streets and bridges.

He also intends to spend at least $175,000 on the widening of Chelsea street, Charlestown, from the navy yard to the new Chelsea South Bridge, which is under construction at a cost of $750,000.

The widening of Mount Vernon street, the Mayor said, is important to the development of 2,000,000 square feet of land in that vicinity. Already two big concerns are about to be located on this property. The American Radiator Company and the Dollar Company, a lumber concern from the Pacific, want to build there. The Radiator company alone will employ 2,000 people.

The work to be undertaken will also furnish work for many now unemployed.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color, 15c and 30c.

For Freckles, Rough or Muddy Complexion

USE MERCOLIZED WAX

The freckling, discoloring or roughening which delicate skins are subject after exposure to wind or sun, often appearing in early spring, may really be gotten rid of. Ordinary mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any drug store or toilet counter. There's no more effective way of combating these ugly spots, muddy patches, pimples or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

The mercolized wax method is appreciated particularly by those who prefer "natural beauty" to that which is obviously otherwise.

LLOYD GEORGE OPENS GENOA CONFERENCE

Regrets Absence of U. S., but Says There Is Much to Justify Our Caution

By International News Service.

Genoa, April 10.—"If the Genoa economic conference fails despair will creep over the entire world," declared Premier Lloyd George this afternoon, in his keynote speech opening this great international conclave. The British statesman deplored the absence of the United States.

"The economic world is not composed of two hemispheres, but is one unbroken sphere," declared the Premier. "Therefore, we all regret the absence of the great western republic. But there is much to justify her caution.

The Russian delegation made a dramatic entrance. They were the last to arrive and made their way slowly through the crowd to their seats. They were spic and span in swallow-tailed coats and well groomed lounges.

Premier Facta spoke in Italian. His speech was translated into English by Mme. Agresti, an English woman, who spoke in loud, clear tones that carried to all parts of the room.

Messages of greeting from King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Poincare were read and received with cheers.

ALIEN PROPERTY REPORT HITS AT GERMANS

Scores Plan to Pay American Claims at Depreciated Value of Marks

Washington, April 10.—An accounting of the $350,000,000 worth of enemy property held by the government was given the Senate today in a report, the first compiled since February, 1919, filed by Alien Property Custodian Thomas W. Miller in response to a resolution by Senator King.

"The final disposition of this property," Mr. Miller said, "will undoubtedly have a direct bearing on the economic relations between this country and Europe, with particular reference to the late enemy powers. The sequestered property will also have a bearing on the question of the settlement of American claims against Germany."

Discussing the $415,000,000 of American claims against Germany, Mr. Miller recalled the terms of the Knox-Porter peace resolution, indicating that no disposition should be made of enemy property held by the United States until the German government had provided for the satisfaction of all American claims. He asserted Congress must evolve some plan whereby American claims against Germany may be adjudicated by some proper tribunal created by law.

"There are several classes of claims against Germany," Mr. Miller said, "as, for instance, those of Americans whose cash was seized by the German custodian, and who are now being offered the return of their money at the depreciated value of the mark, a reduction of 720 per cent. from the pre-war value. This proposition amounts to confiscation on the part of the German government."

ARTHUR BURCH FACES SECOND MURDER TRIAL

Los Angeles, April 10.—The second trial of Arthur C. Burch for the murder of J. Belton Kennedy was to start all over again today. Charges of jury tampering, which resulted in the arrest of one man on a felony charge and threatened procedure against another for contempt of court, halted the trial last week, when the entire jury panel was discharged. Sixty-five venremen were summoned.

Cherbourg, April 10 (By the Associated Press).—The Cunard steamship Mauretania arrived today from New York, making the trip from the Ambrose Channel lightship, 3,161 miles, in five days, 10 hours and 9 minutes.

This is declared to be the fastest time recorded by any trans-Atlantic vessel since the beginning of the war, in August, 1914.

OCEAN TRAVEL FROM BOSTON BOOMING

Is Back to 1913 Basis as Lines Resume Sailings to Europe

The port of Boston will come back partly into its own again this Summer with the heavy bookings of trans-Atlantic passengers and the restoration of steamship service to accommodate the rush of travel.

Not since 1913 has passenger traffic been so heavy out of Boston. The Cunard line resumes sailings to Queenstown and Liverpool, suspended in 1914, with the new 20,000 ton steamship Laconia on May 3.

The White Star line also has a new steamer, the Pittsburg, to mark its resumption of sailings to Queenstown and Liverpool.

Demand for accommodations to Ireland has resulted in arrangements for excursions by the various lines and the United States lines sends two steamers here in June for special sailings. The Irish-American line also announces sailings this Summer.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES FOR QUINCY WAR HERO

U. S. NAVY CAN'T FIGHT WITH 67,000 MEN

Only Enough to Keep 13 of 18 "Treaty Battleships" in Trim, Says Hard

By WILLIAM HARD.
Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.

Washington, April 10.—This controversy over the navy has now reached the point at which each side is making general statements in positive and absolutely contradictory terms and the public could hardly be blamed if it did not know which side to believe.

Congressman Kelley and his majority associates in the House Appropriations Committee say that 67,000 men can run the navy.

Congressmen Tinkham, Wason and their minority associates in the committee say that it cannot. Which side is telling the truth?

I find that 67,000 men—or for that matter 57,000 or 47,000—could certainly man the treaty navy, if nobody cared whether the navy could fight or not. On the other hand, if the purpose of a navy is to be reasonably ready to fight, then 67,000 men will keep only 13 of our 18 treaty battleships in commission.

Let us imagine Secretary Denby sitting down to decide what he can do and cannot do with 67,000 men. In the first place he must put a certain number of men on shore duty. If the total number of men allowed in the whole navy is 67,000, the shore proportion of men will be 21,000. Therefore the number of men left for duty on ships will be only 46,000.

Of these 46,000 a certain proportion must be put on cruisers, destroyers, submarines, colliers, oilers, cargo ships, transports, tugs, gunboats, mine-sweepers, hospital ships, patrol vessels and so on, if the navy is to be efficiently balanced.

If there are only 46,000 men to be put on ships, then 30,500, according to navy experience, must be put on the smaller ships—ships smaller than battleships. The number of men left for the battleships will therefore only be 15,500. But 15,500 men will not man eighteen battleships. On each battleship, if it is to have navy 90 per cent. of its operating strength, there must be 1,187 men. It follows that the number of battleships which 15,500 men can man is not eighteen, but thirteen.

The navy-enlisted personnel of 67,000 men will therefore leave five of our eighteen treaty battleships unmanned and useless. That is the statistical percentage. It justifies Congressman Tinkham.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Members of Smart Set Plan Sale for Radcliffe

Miss Dorothy Batchelder is one of the younger set actively connected with the campaign for funds being carried on for the Girl Scouts of Massachusetts. Miss Batchelder is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Batchelder

MISS DOROTHY BATCHELDER

By BETTY ALDEN

MRS. GEORGE BURRAGE of Chestnut Hill is in charge of the exhibition and sale of tied and dyed work being conducted by a committee of society folk at the Radcliffe Shop on Boylston street, beginning tomorrow and continuing all this week.

The artistic scarves, negligees, blouses and household hangings that will be shown are the work of Miss Mabel C. Osborne, a Radcliffe graduate of New York, the articles to be sold for the benefit of the Radcliffe endowment fund.

Miss Osborne has recently been awarded a first prize of $150 for one of her scarves exhibited by the Art Alliance of New York, and her beautifully designed fabrics show the touch of the artist and the enthusiast.

Working with Mrs. Burrage at the sale will be Mrs. George W. Valiant of Commonwealth avenue, Mrs. S. Burt Wolbach of Beacon street, and Mrs. Alfred P. Hebard of Cambridge and St. Louis.

Apropos of affairs in aid of the Radcliffe endowment fund, there is another clever scheme "on foot" to swell the fund, for on Saturday of this week a Roman flower market will be held on the sidewalk in Copley square.

Mrs. William Perkins Homans has charge of this affair and assisting her on her committee are Mrs. Richard C. Curtis of Marlborough street, Miss Ellen Curtis, and Miss Phyllis Robbins of Commonwealth avenue. The committee plans to have a donkey with flower-laden panniers led about by a Radcliffe student in peasant costume. Other students also in costume, who are members of the Junior League or the Sewing Circle, will be on hand to beguile the passing crowds with pretty nosegays.

The flower market will be preceded on Friday by a sale of Easter flowers in the Radcliffe Shop on Boylston street.

Miss Dorothy Batchelder, daughter of Mrs. George L. Batchelder, was one of the most earnest workers for the "trash and treasure" sale held last week in aid of the Massachusetts Girl Scouts.

Just at present society in a large number of cities is interesting itself quite conspicuously in this organization, and various entertainments are being given right along to help swell the Girl Scouts' treasury.

Just recently a notable affair took place at the capital at Rauscher's for this benefit, when a score of young people posed in living pictures and fairy legends, the pictures being portraits of the Spanish school.

Among the participants was Miss Anna Hamlin, daughter of the Charles Sumner Hamlins, who was introduced to society in Boston a few years ago, and is a member of the Chilton Club here. The early part of the Winter Miss Hamlin spent in Bermuda with her mother, where she was extensively entertained by members of the Winter colony there.

Mrs. Wilfrid de Puy was a Goya beauty and Mrs. William Marshall Bullitt one of Antonio Mora's best known subjects. Others who took part in the affair, which was attended by a distinguished audience, included Miss Cornelia Vanderbilt, Miss Sidney Webb, Prince Eugene Lubomirski and Miss Katherine Mackay of New York, who is the house guest of Miss Alice Harding, for whom she substituted.

MONEY PROBERS USE SHOVELS AT CAPITAL

Finding of Bills Near Engraving Bureau Leads to New Search

By Associated Press.

Washington, April 10.—While still trying to solve the mystery of the $10,000 in $5 bills turned over to them by a boatman who found the money floating in the Potomac River, Department of Justice agents dug in various places in the vicinity of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Whether they had definite clews of money stolen from the bureau and buried nearby could not be learned, nor could it be ascertained whether the search had any connection with the inventory being taken of the money production plant of the bureau.

The bills, which had been torn into fragments and place d in an envelope, were examined by Director Hill of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, who succeeded in that office on the dismissal of James W. Wilmeth and numerous other officials of the bureau.

MARY LANDON BAKER TO SAIL FOR WEDDING

New York, April 10.—"This is the last time we are going to be married." With a laugh as though the joke were on her, Mary Landon Baker thus characterized, upon her arrival here from, Chicago today, her present determination not to leave Allister McCormick at the church again. She is on her way to Fairbridge, Surrey, England, where the young millionaire of the International Harvester McCormicks awaits her. Miss Baker went on: "We're going to get married, that is certain."

26 KILLED IN UPPER SILESIA EXPLOSION

Martial Law Declared; Most of the Victims Were French Soldiers

Gleiwitz, Upper Silesia, April 10.—Martial law was declared in the district today following a mysterious explosion in which at least twenty-six persons were killed and about ten were wounded.

Twenty-three of the dead were French soldiers. The other three were Germans.

French troops were digging in a graveyard, looking for hidden arms when a buried hand grenade exploded. This, in turn, set off a hidden ammunition dump. Grave stones were overturned and the cemetery chapel as well as several nearby houses were wrecked. A great hole was torn in the earth and the French were buried beneath the debris.

The explosion was followed by intense excitement, which was heightened by the accusation of the French that they were the victims of a plot. The Inter-Allied control commission, has ordered Gleiwitz into public mourning.

General Lerond, French chief of the Inter-Allied commission, witnessed the explosion. Later he ordered an investigation to determine if the munitions had been hidden by Germans or Poles.

JAP MINISTER MUM ON DARIEN AGREEMENT

Tokio, April 10 (By the Associated Press).—Viscount Uchida, Japanese Foreign Minister, in a statement in the native press, has failed to confirm the report of an agreement at Darien between representatives of the Far Eastern republic and Japanese delegates. He said if the Japanese troops were withdrawn, Japanese residents must follow. He added Japan would demand strict payment of Russia's debts.

PAPER TRADE TONE GREATLY IMPROVED

New York, April 10.—Business depression is over and a gradual improvement may be expected, declared Dr. Hugh P. Baker, executive secretary of the American Paper and Pulp Association, today. Dr. Baker is attending the convention of the paper manufacturers of the United States. "Fine paper orders are 75 per cent. of normal, some of the specialities are over 90 per cent., and the sentiment is far better than at this time last year," he said.

Gifts for Easter

The crocus, the hyacinth, and the tulip blooming so gaily amid the young grass suggest the colors of the Easter gift—colors that are found among the semi-precious stones used in the informal pieces of jewelry that make such delightful springtime remembrances.

The yellow of the daffodil is reflected in the amber beads or the topaz rings and pins.

The hyacinth is glimpsed in the amethyst earrings and bracelet, while the carnelian is as red as the red tulip.

Jade is the essence of springtime. It strikes a delightful contrasting note when worn with black or dark blue.

There are many trinkets which any one would like to carry in the Easter parade—a dorin box on its slender chain, a mesh bag of gold or silver, one of the new bead bags in soft pastel colors, or one of the smart leather purses.

Won't you choose your Easter gifts in our shop?

A great singer pays tribute to

The AMPICO

AT HER concert in Symphony Hall on Sunday last, the living accompanist was replaced by the Ampico. It was marvelous—uncanny—the great grand piano without the touch of a human hand accompanying the great singer! But they were human accompaniments recorded months ago at the Ampico Studios in New York—now available for all singers—the great Ponselle—the Student, the singer at home—reproduced with the same perfection with which the Ampico re-enacts the playing of the greatest pianists in the world.

The wonder of the Ampico cannot be described.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

Park Theatre "Revival Week" Offers Chance to See Old Productions

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

IT IS doubtless the success of the "revival week" which took place in New York two weeks ago that has prompted the management of the Park Theatre to give a revival week here. They are giving a series of the old productions that have stood out as milestones in the history of films."

There is great value in running such a series—provided the pictures are the really successful ones. "The worthwhile things," as Heywood Gill would call them—for we can see in what way the motion picture industry has improved—or slipped back. We are a little tired of hearing that "of course, the movies are still in their infancy." Let's see if it isn't growing up a little. Watch it see old stuff. They are the pick of the productions made during the past few years.

Yesterday Mary Pickford's "Daddy Long Legs" headed the bill and was shown with the Goldwyn-Hughes film, "The Old Nest." Today we have the Cosmopolitan prize production, "Homer-ess," with one of the best films Nazimova has ever made, "Out of the Fog." Tuesday the management presents "Behold My Wife," featuring Mabel Julienne Scott, with one of the early Chaplin comedies in which Mabel Normand and Marie Dressler appeared with him, "Tillie's Punctured Romance."

"ON WITH THE DANCE."

On Wednesday we have Mae Murray in her George Fitzmaurice picture, "On With the Dance," and Douglas Fairbanks in "His Majesty, the American," Thursday, Friday and Saturday are "C. B." De Mille days. Thursday's bill has "Why Change Your Wife," while the Bandbox Sweet feature, "The Unpardonable Sin," is also shown.

Friday we see Thomas Meighan and Gloria Swanson in "Male and Female," taken from the Barrie play. The Admirable Crichton," and D. W. Griffith's "Dream Street." Saturday we have the companion picture to "Why Change Your Wife," "Don't Change Your Husband," and Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid." Sunday comes Mary Pickford again in "Through the Back Door," and the Famous George Loane Tucker production, "The Miracle Man."

"ORPHANS" AT POPULAR PRICES

FOLLOWING this novelty week at the Park comes the Griffith "spectacle," as the p. a.'s are wont to call it, "Orphans of the Storm." This, too, is a novelty, in so much as we seldom have a production at popular prices within such a short time after it has been shown as a special feature. All who didn't see the "Orphans" at the Tremont Theatre are given another chance and all those who

MARION DAVIES AT THE ORPHEUM THIS WEEK

SCENE FROM "BEAUTY'S WORTH"

Marion Davies in her latest picture, "Beauty's Worth," which ran as a serial story in the Boston American all last week, will appear at the Orpheum Theater for an entire week, beginning today.

It is very unusual for the Orpheum to continue any photoplay more than three days, but such is the remarkable quality of the latest Davies photoplay that Manager Victor Morris has created a precedent and will run the picture for a full week.

didn't have an opportunity to see it a second time can do so now.

IT'S A BOY.

A SON was born to Mr. and Mrs. Luther Reed last week, to be known as Luther Reed, junior, and who is destined to follow in the footsteps of his scenario-writing father, unless he prefers to work on the other side of the camera and follow in the footsteps of his mother, Mrs. Reed is known professionally as Naomi Childers and has won fame as a player in Goldwyn productions.

THE Famous Players-Lasky picture, "To Have and to Hold," adapted from the novel by Mary Johnston, is no longer without a leading man. It has been intended as a Betty Compson feature. For some time the casting department has not fired anyone suitable for the other important role, that of the hero. The choice has finally fallen on Bert Lytell. When Mr. Lytell was here recently, he told me that his plans were vague. His contract with Metro has expired, and he was not prepared to sign a new one with that concern at the time.

George Fitzmaurice, who returned from the Famous Players' London studio a few weeks ago, is on his way to Hollywood to wield the megaphone over the film. Mrs. Fitzmaurice, better known as Ouida Bergere, will work out the scenario.

KYNE STORIES FOR HOLT.

THE Paramount Company has bought a series of stories by Peter B. Kyne, which are intended for Jack Holt's starring films. The first three stories to be filmed are "The Lost Kingdom," which Mr. Kyne and Albert Levino are adapting from the former's "Humanizing Mr. Wimsby"; "The Land Just Over Yonder" and a new "Cappy Ricks" story.

ROSA PONSELLE ENTHUSES HUGE AUDIENCE

Many Opera Airs in Well Chosen Program; Schumann-Heink Also Pleases

By FRED J. McISAAC.

Symphony Hall was jammed twice yesterday. In the afternoon Schumann-Heink filled it, an ordinary feat for her, but in the evening the hall was crowded to the doors for Rosa Ponselle, a very remarkable outpouring for a young artist.

Ponselle is the legitimate successor of Nordica and Emmy Destinn at the Metropolitan Opera House. She sings the big dramatic roles. In three years she has made a place for herself in the world's greatest opera house, which is astonishing when you consider that five years ago she was singing jazz in vaudeville.

PROGRAM WELL CHOSEN.

She is a remarkable figure on a concert platform; she might play Leonora or any of the big Italian operatic roles without any special makeup. Although she was born in Meridan, Ct., and was educated in the public schools of that town, she is as exotic as any Sicilian or Neapolitan prima donna in appearance.

Her program was well chosen, with a number of opera airs to enable her to display her great dark voice at its best. But the biggest number of the evening was her singing of "Vissi d'arte" from "Tosca" while the piano played her accompaniment brilliantly, accurately, precisely, without anybody at the keyboard.

This piece of witchcraft was accomplished by the Ampico inside a Knabe piano, a feature of the concert which was not advertised, which surprised the audience and which astonished and delighted it. She also sang a spritely bagbee called "Will o' the Wisp" by Spross, with the Ampico.

PIANO SOLOS.

All other numbers were sung with Stuart Ross at the piano, an admirable accompanist and an excellent soloist as he proved in two solo numbers.

Ponselle's concert method has tremendously increased since she sang in Boston a year ago. She is confident, assured and at ease. She was free from nervousness and in perfect vocal condition. The result was singing which awakened the greatest enthusiasm, particularly the Tosca air with the Ampico and the big Ernani air, seldom heard on the concert platform because of its great difficulty.

The English diction also was remarkably good, and her English songs at the end of the program were admirable.

In the afternoon Madame Schumann-Heink acquitted herself in the manner her followers are satisfied to hear. She also awakened great enthusiasm.

HEAR VENIZELOS IS TO BE GREEK PREMIER

Charlotte, N. C., April 10.—A number of friends who greeted former Premier Venizelos of Greece and his party when they passed through here en route north stated they were informed that the former head of the Greek government was hurrying back home to resume the Premiership at the call of King Constantine.

MEDBURY

Says We Now Have Alphabetical Crackers on the Market, but Some People Are So Illiterate They Can't Eat Them.

There are certain crackers on the market shaped like the letters in the alphabet. It's getting so now that we have to have an education to eat.

Nobody wants to go to college just so they can enjoy a cookie.

The old-fashioned crackers are the best; you can eat them whether you've got any brains or not.

The idea is these alphabetical cookies is to teach the children how to spell, but it doesn't work. It tastes the same to them as it.

One little kid got a stomach ache and his mother asked him where he got it and he said, "I don't know, it was somewhere between F and P.

His ate eleven of them and when he put them all together they spelled "indigestion."

Another kid made the word mouse-trap. He ate the nine letters and they didn't hurt him, but he got sick on the hyphen.

The manufacturers make all the letters in the alphabet, but they don't make the punctuation marks.

They ought to have periods, so the kids would know when to stop eating.

Still, the bakers couldn't charge as much for a comma as they could for a question mark.

One kid was eating these cookies in a hurry and his mother told him not to eat them so fast, and to wait a while between each one, but the kid said, "I can't; I haven't got any semicolons left."

Another kid never could learn to spell. He had all the letters in the alphabet, but he didn't know how to routine them.

Instead of eating them alphabetically he ate them just as they came out of the box.

Ordinarily they come out from A to Z, but the guy who packed them in the box never went to college.

Don't ever eat these cookies in the dining room. Your table manners might be all right, but your spelling may be bad.

CONCERT TESTIMONIAL

•TO EMIL MOLLENHAUER

The People's Symphony Orchestra concert yesterday was a testimonial to Emil Mollenhauer, and a big house turned out for the occasion.

The contribution of Mollenhauer to Boston's musical life cannot be overestimated. For many years he has been the competent leader of the Handel and Haydn, the Festival Orchestra, and now of the People's Symphony.

Hero Smashes Window and Saves Man From Under Electric

Samuel Augustino, forty-six years old, of No. 203 Lake street, Arlington, was saved from death beneath the wheels of an electric car in Haymarket square subway by the quick action of George Mason, thirty-four years old, of No. 29 Upton street, South End, who, seeing the man fall on the tracks, smashed one of the windows to notify the starting of the car.

Both men are at the Relief Hospital. Augustino suffering from contusions and abrasions of the face and eyes; Mason from contusions and abrasions of the left hand and forearm.

The car was about to start when Augustino, in some unknown manner, fell directly in front of it without being noticed by the motorman.

NEIGHBOR FREES MRS. MULLEN FROM JAIL

South Boston Man Pays Bill of $116 and Mother Returns to Children

Through the generosity of John Woods, a South Boston coal dealer and neighbor, who paid a bill of $116 for back rent owed by Mrs. Bridget Mullen of No. 487 East Broadway, South Boston, mother of seven children, the latter was released from Charles Street Jail, where she had been confined since Saturday for contempt of court.

With Mrs. Mullen, when she was released, was her infant, whom she had been allowed to take to jail with her.

"Just an act of decency and an act of humaneness," was the explanation given by Mr. Woods for his thoughtful act. "If neighbors can't help one another in trouble then things have come to a pretty pass," he said.

Mrs. Mullen brands as false the charge that she had but $2,500 on John R. Murphy to win against Carley.

"Why, the idea," she said, "and me a Curley woman and all my boarders Curley men. I never had $2,500 in my life."

YOU NEVER CAN TELL! Who would think that this charming girl is a mere man? William MacIntosh is the leading woman of "The Wrong Steer," the Tech play to be given at Jordan Hall, April 18.

ROCK-A-BY-BABY! Little Florence Jackson of Philadelphia, eight months old, can't have her mother with her so she listens to her mama sing lullabies over the radio phone. An excellent idea for professional mothers who are away from home.

THE MANLY ART! Tossave Zozzos, Italian postman, who has just finished her jail term at Milan for insisting on wearing men's clothing. Snapped as she appeared when arrested. (Wide World.)

HEATHEN OFFERINGS TO THE DEAD! Here's material for a Brisbane editorial. Europe is crying for food, but Bulgarian peasants would rather feed their religious spirit than their own bodies. At regular intervals they bring the choicest of foods to the cemeteries in the belief that the dead souls must be fed. This photo shows a typical display of food set aside to the dead in the Widin district. (Underwood.)

THOSE EYES! Eugenie Dennis, 17, of Atchison, Kan., has astonished experts by telling them of murders and the losing of valuable articles, almost at the time they occurred. (Underwood.)

HURRY UP, FANS, AND GET FREE RADIO SETS

Boston American Has Plenty to Give Away, While Stores Experience Shortage

By A. B. HOAG.

Get in line, you radio fans, for the free radiophone receiving sets being given away by the Boston American.

Only the lucky can buy sets. Hundreds are turned away daily by the radio stores because receiving sets cannot be bought at any price. Factories working night and day cannot keep up with the orders.

The Boston American has plenty, and they will be given away free. They are the famous Victor super-sensitive radiophone receiving sets, complete with headphones. The detector and tuner, which is fitted with a patented device found on no other set whereby the primary and secondary coils are wound in parallel, retails for $25.

The earphones, which have 2200 ohms resistance and are fitted with an unusually comfortable headband, sell for $11.50.

These sets are rated to have a range of fifty miles. Yet they have been known to bring in New York, 200 miles away.

They are given away for twenty new subscriptions to the Boston American, each for six months. If you live more than thirty miles from Boston they will be given away for five new subscriptions and ten dollars.

If you want more information call at the Boston American office and this free offer will be courteously and gladly explained.

Little three-year-old Dorothy Hasselbrook of No. 42 Kempton street, Roxbury, simply went wild over the Victor receiving phone when she was given a demonstration of it.

"Oooooo! Tell it again!"

The voice of the story-teller came so clearly that without realizing that her words would not be heard, she asked to have the story repeated.

She was not asked if she liked the test. The shine of her childish eyes and the intense interest with which she took in every word of the story were commendation enough. After the story was over she at once evidenced a strong desire for a set, and when good-byes were said, it was evident that there would be no peace for mother until a set was forthcoming.

Bedtime stories are broadcasted from Medford two nights a week as part of the every-evening program. They are told by professional story-tellers, who have found the way to a child's heart and imagination. With the Victor set given away by the Boston American these stories may be picked up by anybody in the neighborhood of Boston.

GEN. VON FALKENHAYN IS DEAD AT POTSDAM

London, April 10.—General Erich von Falkenhayn, who played a conspicuous part in the German army during the World War, is dead at Potsdam, according to advices received here.

General von Falkenhayn was the man most responsible for the strategy of the German armies in the early years of the war. Relieved of his post as commander-in-chief of the Turkish field army in 1918, he confined his duties to the general staff. He resigned in a huff in 1919 because the Kaiser consulted von Hindenburg, regarding the best conduct to the war.

SMALL RADIO SET MADE BY BOY OF 13

Novel Contrivance Can Be Enclosed Within Penny Match Box

The race for the honor of making the smallest practical radiophone receiver seems to have been won by Kenneth R. Hillman, of Plainfield, N. J., who is, by the way, only thirteen years old.

The entire set, with the exception of the ear-phones and aerial, is enclosed in or about an ordinary match box of the safety variety that retails for a cent. Clips and lengths of wire provide a means for hooking the set up to a wire bedspring or a fence and to a ground. The receivers are of the kind generally employed.

In the interior of the box is a home made crystal detector with a catwhisker. The detector of the box is wound with wire, so as to form a practical coil. A spring, attached to the sliding drawer of the box, presses against the coil, and forms a slide contact. This makes the tuning device.

This set, according to its youthful builder, will pick up not only telephone signals, but music and other things from broadcasting stations ten or fifteen miles away.

One of the most puzzling difficulties that beset beginners in radio work is the occasional "fading out" of the incoming sound, and then its reappearance with varying degrees of rapidity.

No satisfactory explanation of this phenomenon has been advanced. It is, however, believed to be due to atmospheric conditions. It is well known that wireless telephony is rarely as satisfactory in the daytime as it is at night.

When listening to a transmitting station at night, which cannot be heard in the daytime, the fadings are most likely to be noticed. The same changes in atmospheric conditions that make the station inaudible in the daytime probably cause these fadings.

The use of a small portable telephone attachment with batteries and an earphone for assisting the deaf to hear has been well known for some time. The same principle indicates the value of radio telephony for the deaf.

Practically any amount of amplification is possible with a receiving radiophone. By this means, persons who are too deaf to hear ordinary concerts, will be enabled to listen to the music, lectures, sermons, and other things that are broadcasted by radio.

Question Box for Radioites

Address all communications to Radio Editor, Boston American. No set Summer street, Boston. Sign your full name and address, only initials will be printed.

Q.—In winding a loading coil or a single slide tuning coil for use with a crystal detector, which wire will give the best results, No. 25 or No. 22? Is the following hook up O. K.?—A. V. M., Boston.

A.—No. 22 is better. Your diagram is wrong, as it does not permit tuning of any kind. Instead of attaching one end of secondary coil directly to aerial circuit, it should be attached to one end of the tuning coil.

Q.—1—Is it necessary to have two variometers on a set? 2—If I should have a variometer with a vario coupler, crystal detector, a variable condenser and a very good antenna, will I be able to hear Pittsburgh or Newark, N. J.? 3—Do you have to have an audion to operate a loud speaker?—S. A. C., Somerville.

A.—1—No. 2—Possibly, but unlikely. 3—Yes.

Q.—1—The enclosed hookup is with a Murdock loose coupler. I have 100 feet copper bronze aerial wire from house to tree, about forty feet from the ground. My set is grounded properly, and I receive signals fairly well but cannot seem to tune in Medford, T. How would you connect a loading coil in the aerial? I have four posts. Do I use all four or just the two above?—H. O. A., Quincy.

A.—Look for shorts in aerial or ground. 2—Connect the coil in series using the two lower posts.

Q.—I have a crystal set, using variable and fixed condensers and Clapp-Eastham loose coupler. Thursday evening when I was getting Schenectady they seemed to grow suddenly faint, and then become stronger at intervals of about five minutes. I use an aerial thirty feet long and of three wires.—G. H. E., West Roxbury.

A.—I do not see how you could get Schenectady on a crystal set with a 90-foot aerial. Your trouble with fading is probably due to poor insulation in aerial circuit or poor ground connection. If you lengthened your aerial it would probably help.

Q.—In the March issue of "Wireless Age," I found an interesting article entitled a "Dry Cell Vacuum Tube." This tube operates on 1.1 volts, and uses two-tenths of an ampere continuously. Knowing that there are a million other fellows wishing to avoid the greater expense and trouble of using the storage battery, I make a motion that sections of this article be printed in your column for the benefit of those not able to obtain a Wireless Age. Please tell me and all of my wireless friends how much one of these tubes cost and where they may be purchased.—H. S. E., Roxbury.

A.—These tubes depend on an especially delicate filament that is unusually liable to damage from jar. At present they are only in an experimental stage, but I have sent for further data, and will let you and your brother enthusiasts know when I get it.

Q.—I have a tuning coil, fixed condenser and crystal detector. The aerial is fifty feet long and fifty feet high, with two strands. Would this be entirely satisfactory?—F. H., Jamaica Plain.

A.—A variable condenser in shunt in secondary circuit will lead to finer tuning, and another in series in primary would improve the tuning even more.

BROOKLINE TO SEE BRITISH GOLFERS

Strong Team of Amateurs Will Play in International Match Here

By Universal Service.

New York, April 10.—Roger Wethered, who tied Jack Hutchison for the British open golf championship last year, William Hunter, amateur titleholder of Great Britain; Cyril Tolley, British amateur champion in 1920; Eloc Carter, champion of Ireland; W. B. Torrance, considered Scotland's finest amateur; Harry Braid, son of a famous golfer; J. L. C. Jenkins, one time British champion; C. V. L. Hooman, Gordon Simpson and E. I. Holderness, will constitute the British team in an international match with the United States representatives this year, it is learned from semi-official sources.

The match will be played prior to the national amateur championship at the Country Club, Brookline, Mass.

If the men selected accepted the invitation, they will be the best array of amateurs ever to compete in a tournament here. All were good enough to displace Colin Aylmer, Alexander Armour and Jesse Sweetzer in the R. H. Mentmorency, prominent in golf competition abroad in the recent past.

Tom Armour, who ordinarily would be picked, being ineligibility as a British subject, is a deserving name not mentioned. Probably for the reason that he has accepted the secretaryship of the Westminster Biltmore Club, after playing professional golf in this country for three years.

DEAN GIVES HARVARD ATHLETES CLEAN BILL

"I know of no Harvard athlete who should be disqualified from athletics for reasons similar to those for which several Princeton athletes have been reported to be disqualified" is the statement of Dean L. R. B. Briggs, chairman of the Harvard athletic committee, when interviewed in regard to the report that a Harvard athlete was under suspicion.

"If any one should be disqualified, I can assure you that he will be," the Crimson preceptor says.

OPERATE ON CAPT. ANSON FOR GLANDULAR TROUBLE

Chicago, April 10.—Adrian C. Anson, former manager of the Chicago Nationals, known throughout the baseball world as "Cap Anson," is recovering from an operation at St. Luke's Hospital. He was stricken on the street and rushed to the hospital. He suffered with glandular trouble. Physicians say his condition is favorable. He will celebrate his seventieth birthday April 17.

FLAGG TAVERN MEMBERS PLAY FIVE HOLES

By FRED G. THAYER.

The Flagg Tavern Golf Club has a few players visit the links every day, although the big crowd motors out on the week-end. Only five holes are playable now, but the prospects are bright.

As suggested by Deacon Brown the expenditure of a few thousand dollars will transform the present property into an attractive nine-hole course. But this cannot be done over night, nor without that layout of money.

The first tee will ultimately be alongside of the present first green, adjacent to the N. Y. State highway. The first seven will be about 250 yards distant in a very pretty valley, not a punch bowl effect, but a deep oval drop from the elevation of the tee.

A short walk through the pines to the foot of the hill on the opposite slope is a 20-yard carry across a present marsh. The hole is 260 yards long. In a northwest wind, the prevailing wind on that course, few drives would ever carry the marsh, but it is not expected that this marsh will exist in the Fall, or next year, but will be a beautiful grassy fairway. The green is already mapped out and seeded.

The B. & M. Fitchburg division main line to Ayer runs back of the second green and on approaching the third tee players must cross the track at this point.

Stone Wall Marks Limits All the Way to the Hole.

On the left of the third fairway a stone wall marks the out-of-bounds limits all the way to the hole, 425 yards. The second shot will have to carry a water hazard 75 yards in front of the green. A thicket of willows in the background brings out the location of the green very distinctly. The direction of play here is also the same as No. 2, due northwest.

The fourth hole is played from the willows at right angles to the third fairway and the green is set in front of another thicket of willows. The distance will be 250 yards.

The fifth hole parallels the fourth fairway off the tee and then takes a left-hand turn or dog-leg to a green alongside of the third tee. This hole will measure 500 to 525 yards. A stone wall hazard 100 yards in front of the tee will stop the topped shot and on the second shot the same water hazard encountered on the third hole will again face the long hitters. A marsh will define the left-hand out-of-bound limits. This hole crosses the old Connecticut Indian horse trail.

Crossing the track again to a tee beside the new second hole, play will be directed parallel to the second fairway in the opposite direction, southeast. This hole will be across the land to be reclaimed and will measure 300 yards.

Seventh Will Be Natural With Tee Below the Green

The seventh hole will be a dandy—a natural hole with the tee below the green and a deep stone hazard, a regular yawning ravine, between the tee and the hole, which is situated on the top of a hillock not over thirty yards wide and down both its sides are an excellent growth of trees to catch the misdirected or inaccurate shot.

The eighth tee may be one of a number of spots, but tentatively it is planned to put it on the hill-top first described. The fairway is a side hill variety sloping to the left. The green will be set into the foot of the hill and built up, about 325 yards from the tee.

The underbrush and barns will be removed in the new ninth fairway, the second shot passing up over the hill to the left of the seventh green. The present first green back of the new No. 1 tee is to be the new ninth green. This hole will be from 375 to 400 yards.

Adjoining land will make possible ultimately the addition of nine more holes, but this is only a possibility.

FILENE STORE BOWLERS WIN AMERICAN CUP

Filene's five now has a lead of twenty points and with only three weeks remaining to complete the schedule the leaders have the beautiful trophy tucked safely away from the runners-up Thayer McNeil Co. quintet.

The Boston Retail Store Bowling League with sixteen teams has been most successful this year owing to the intense interest and enthusiasm aroused in the contests for the Boston American prize cup which goes to the winner each year until it is won three times and then passes into the lucky team's permanent possession.

The Filene champs are repeating last year's performance when they captured first place in the league with twelve teams competing. The popularity of the league last year together with the Boston American's offer in the cup resulted in Thayer McNeils, Bigelow, Kennard Company, Chandlers, A. G. Spaulding, Iver Johnson and Liggetts to apply for membership. Talbots and Continental Clothing Company were not members this year.

All the matches have been rolled at the Hawley street alleys and keen rivalry has marked the matches. The league has been an important factor in developing better feeling, good fellowship and sociability among the employes of the many stores represented and in accomplishing these results has served an excellent purpose.

Within a few weeks President Gerrish Chilahan, Houghton, Dutton Company, Vice-President William Murray, Leopold, Morse Company and Secretary Harold McNulty, William Filene's Sons, will announce plans for the annual banquet and shoutes party that will close the store bowling history.

Rangers Protest Scoring of Two Goals That Won for Gray & Davis

By ART CURLY.

The first game in the new Paton Cup competition, between the South Boston Rangers and Gray & Davis was played at the South Boston Strandway Park before a crowd of nearly 2,000 fans. The contest was a fast and furious fight with the Grays finally coming out at the top of a two to one score.

The Grays garnered both of their goals in the first frame, and both were protested by the Rangers. McLeish was the first to count on a corner-kick. Some claimed that he bodied the ball through while the Rangers contended that it was fisted in. Referee Andrews, however, allowed the score.

Neil Doherty was credited with the second goal. He had worked the ball well down the field and parted with it, before he could get outside. The ball was returned and he headed it in.

It was in the second period that the Rangers made their only score through a penalty. Allan Wilson handled the ball in his penalty area and Lawler, taking the free try, drove past Forsythe.

The lineup:

Gray & Davis—Forsythe, goal; Counihard and Wilson, fullbacks; Grant, McKay and Milton, halfbacks; Doherty, Limb, McLeish, Craig and Doig, forwards.

Rangers—Travers, goal; Lawler and Nicholson, fullbacks; McDonough, Pierson and Cook, halfbacks; McLean, Cosgrove, Merchant, Crothers and Reed, forwards. Referee—J. Andrews.

BRAVES RIGHT ON EDGE FOR OPENING GAME OF BIG SEASON

MITCHMEN ANXIOUS TO GET THE JUMP ON LEAGUE RIVALS

By NICK FLATLEY.

Baltimore, Md., April 10—The Braves completed their Spring training affairs today by playing Jack Dunn's International League champions. Then they flit over to Philadelphia and rest on the morrow. And Wednesday they step out in the regular campaign, with everything in it favor, as the Phils do not figure to cut much ice in the scramble for glory.

The training trip has been a complete success in the matter of condition eg and everything else. Fred Mitchell, a steer on a club into the race in as good condition as any out for ought to be. He's never had an accident at. Spring, and not one of the players has been down with a sore arm. Better than that no man ever will be sore.

The last two games with the Senators both days but Lord fought hard and showed all the effects of the 10 days' layoff occasioned by the rains in the Carolinas and Virginia, and the Boston athletic step up to the barrier in what is known as the pink of condish.

Players and Manager Believe Club Has Good Chance to Win

Brave players and manager alike believe that the club has a mighty good chance of getting into the sun this season and realize that a whole lot depends on the start. Getting off on the proper foot will insure the club of at least a shot at the pennant, as well as a record well one way to open up arrears.

This will be a Brave year in Boston, and the next couple of weeks can make it a real big one. No Boston National team of recent memory ever seemed to have as good a chance to be a real contender as the present outfit can.

The Mitchmen haven't been hitting much this Spring, but they didn't last year, either. Once the ball is started it will be something else again. The same thing should happen all over, as the team has the offensive power to bear up excellent pitching for very satisfactory results.

All the Pitchers Are as Good as Ever and More Confident

All the Boston pitchers have shown fine form in the recent Southern series, and Manager Mitchell will get away with Oeschger, McQuillan, Fillingim, Nelson, Maguard and Miller, all apparently as good as ever.

McQuillan and Fillingim, as a matter of fact, seem to have a little more stuff and a lot more confidence than they have displayed this early in their more or less heavy work. Both have been on the verge of greatness for quite a spell, and this just happen to step over and will be some at the Allston orchard.

Our Master Mitchell isn't the greatest conversationalist in the universe, but he does admit that he hasn't any trouble picking an ace for his team to be a beginning.

Certain They Will Be Real Dangerous Team

"The boys," he declares, "have played a lot of fine ball this Spring, enough to make it a certainty that they will be a real danger our team as soon as the season starts. Our old pitchers are all in shape, and the new ones, Miller and Maguard, have hopped right into the parade.

"Some of the players, especially Boyd and Powell, haven't been hitting this Spring, but you can't tell a thing by that. Last year I was doubtful about Powell, and kept them to start the season, but I finally did and the pair went like wow during the very first day out. Some athletes have all their base hits for the regular season, and these two seem to belong in that class.

"Our new infield looks to be quite the team in the field, and gives us Barbee as a pinch hitter, and he's one of the most dangerous in the business. If we don't hit some hard luck at the blowoff you can look for the Braves to be right in the race all the way along. The team has the ability and will fight with anybody. And that's about all you need."

Mitchell has not decided yet as to who will start at first base Wednesday. Holke came down with a stiff neck yesterday, and Barbee was chased over to the bag. He didn't seem to have the least trouble shifting the runners around the bases, and handled everything that came his way naturally enough.

Whether or not the sturdiest bird in the world, he's a mighty fine ball player when he is right, and he's up for a few lays at a time in the course of several innings. The fact is he had to stay on the job, as he was down accounted for his services as an assistant.

Larry Kopf will make a large hit with the Boston fans. He is a very smooth and steady fielder and with Ford, forms a nifty double play team. He knows all the tricks of the game and is one of the best in the business at the throw to the man on the runner. He doesn't hit for a million, but he's dangerous in the pinches, and as he never chases bad balls he makes the pitchers put in their best.

Kopf is a fine second place man in the batting—a good hunter and effective with the hit and run. When Holke is in the smash, Larry will bat second. When Barbee plays third Kopf will step down as the utility chap who has few peers in the particular role on the offense.

Tout Jap Collegian as Shortstop Phenom

Chicago, April 10. — Herb Hunter, returning from a Winter trip in Japan, spent coaching college teams, says there is a Japanese shortstop named Teddy Kubota, attending Waseda University, who is the greatest player in his position he has ever seen. He likens him to Charley Hollacher in size and style of play and says he is even better than the Cubs' star. Hunter thinks he may be able to induce Kubota to report to the Cardinals after he has finished his college course in Japan.

IN a basin set in a sea of great hollows Mystic Valley lay in a hollow of the Adirondacks a pleasant valley with a wealth of great pines and cedars through whose branches the wind made a cheerful sound in keeping with the song of the stream rising from the higher ranges on its far journey to the Hudson.

A church steeple, white and tapering, gave a touch of loftiness and strength from a wood chimneys signalled invitations to share the hospitality of scores of farm houses and workers in town here.

Mystic Valley had for years and years boasted of only one minister and one doctor. People said Doctor Strickland was born lucky in that he had never plotted a sou! fortune from an invention, for he had a way of forgetting to send his bills, and, of course, his patients forgot to remind him.

His home was a part of the life of an afflicted who, besides being much as the pastor's was a rendezvous for those troubled in spirit; the two men worked for the good of mankind and their reward was a consciousness of toil well done, with small hope of financial reward.

The doctor, in spite of his shows and his willingness to respond to any call, within a radius of ten miles, found time to indulge in his hobby—some people said it was wild oats—by raising native others less charitably inclined declared he would have been a better doctor if he had not been a good inventor.

Dr. Strickland was always at work in his spare moments on his latest invention, which in the most recent stage found it a charming room.

Gray hair, in unruly masses falling over his forehead, kind eyes and a mouth that could be quizzical on the best occasion, made him the most adored father and uncle in Mystic Valley.

Anne, old niece, who sat in the room with him while he tried to catch the improvement always lost

Who's Who in This Drama of Country Life

DR. STRICKLAND—Inventor, physician, devoted father and generally beloved.

ALIX—His elder daughter and a lover of outdoor life.

CHERRY—His younger daughter, petted by all the family.

PETER JOYCE—A well-to-do neighbor, in love with Cherry.

MARIN LLOYD—A new arrival, also in love with Cherry.

ANNE—The doctor's niece, an efficient housekeeper.

upon him, was a study. With a brain of great power, big ambitions and a heart that was a storehouse of sympathy, she had settled down to the life of a country spinster, with no hope of anything else.

Anne had been a beauty in her youth, but the years had left her with only a wistful prettiness. She was a good cook, a fine housekeeper, and a woman who could be depended upon in any emergency.

Her life had been a hard one, including his prison was a prim spinster with a sharp tongue, who kept his home in apple-pie order, taking the place that the death of Mrs. Strickland had left empty many years ago. Anne liked to sew in the shadow of the bay windows looking over the mountains while her uncle puzzled and frowned.

A Land of Dreams.

In this respect she was quite unlike the doctor's daughters, Alix and Cherry, the former inclined to walks and hill climbing and the latter living in an atmosphere of dreamy idleness which included fairy princes, Cinderellas and romances, old and new.

"I don't know what we'd do without you, Anne," Alix would say to the sister-in-law who was capable, well as soon as the girls got a little older, they'll settle down."

Anne smiled and went on with her work; her quietness and efficiency had not crowded hope out of her heart; she had an eye on Martin Lloyd, a handsome young man lately graduated from an Eastern college and now an expert forester at a nearby lumber camp.

Martin's approach could always be foretold in the Strickland household by Anne's sedulous attention to her hair; she did not hesitate to say she liked the young man.

The doctor looked forward to losing her with dread. Alix when he called his boy, was no housekeeper, lovable and attractive as she was, and her sister he regarded as a white girl.

But Cherry was more than a mere girl to every one but her father. To Peter Joyce, neighbor these many years of the Strickland, she was the most adorable creature in the world; to the negro mammy who cooked for the Doctor she was the potential wife of Peter, and to Alix she was beauty, innocence and gentleness all in one.

No doubt Cherry had been spoiled; she was one of those happy girls every one loved; one of the fortunate ones for whom everything is done; her laughing eyes, her petite self, her air of helplessness won from men a longing to protect; Cherry took it all for granted and lolled through the years in blissful content.

But if Peter Joyce thought of her in terms of love she never dreamed of Peter in terms other than sisterly. To Alix as to her, he was a dear big brother. He came and went with the freedom of one of the family, and whenever there was trouble Peter straightened it out.

The Gossips' Poison.

The gossips of Mystic Valley said openly that he would have moved away long ago if he had not been waiting for Cherry to grow up but Peter had never given any hint of his feeling to the young lady, nor to her father, and Alix would have been the most surprised person in the world to hear it.

Nevertheless, Peter was in love, fortunate in having money enough to do what he chose in a modest way and liking the spot where he had settled by accident he could imagine no happier existence than settling down with the winsome Cherry.

And he was not so much older than she to make the difference a barrier. The advent of Martin Lloyd put the spirit of unrest into Peter Marin, it was rumored, came to call on Anne, Peter fell his own suspicions. The mere thought of losing Cherry gave him a horrible twinge at the heart. And the outcome rested with himself.

Followed by Buckey, his dog, he started cross-country for the Strickland household, and with the free and easy comradeship of the valley entered by the kitchen door.

Cherry was engaged in cooking in a gingham apron and sunbonnet, piled up she made such a picture of domestic efficiency that Peter thrilled at this new discovery of household accomplishment in the girl he loved.

"Oh you dear thing," cried the girl, as the man shut the door on the dog. "Do you want to be a perfect cook?" Then with him—I'm eighteen today and I'm making fudge to celebrate"

"By George," said Peter, "you're eighteen, he said in the same tone he might have used in looking at a beautiful painting or finding a diamond mine.

"Eighteen, Peter, that's righ getting old."

"You may be only eighteen, Miss Cherry," Dinah volunteered, "but you sure does muss up this kitchen so."

Dinah bestowed a wink on Peter—it was evident to her what his feelings toward Cherry were, she thought it was also evident to Cherry. The young lady went on with her fudge making and having already accomplished more than three-quarters of the task, volunteered to allow Peter to test the result

"I wouldn't say it was done yet" Cherry," sa l Peter, tasting a bi after its immersion into the stove and nibbling wry faces

Dinah went on stirring the tempsbone bell interrupted her Anne's head followed the ca "Someone wants you on the phon Cherry."

"If it you are, Peter," she let the young man to keep the fudge from burning while she rushed to her father's study to answer the call.

A Call from Martin.

"It's Martin Lloyd, father—he's coming over."

Alix began to arrange her hair before the mirror as Alix cheeks red with waking, came in at the door. She exchanged a glance with the doctor.

"I should say," she remarked surveying her cousin. "If I can read the stars correctly that a young man of medium build will dark hair and dressed in working clothes is coming to call."

AN ABSORBING SERIAL OF LIFE IN CITY

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

"IT is I, Dr. Carter," he said.

"I am going to give you something to make you sleep better"

"My head aches so;" the patient complained. "It is all because of this trouble about Patty"

The physician glanced inquiringly at the attendant. She answered his questioning look

"Mrs. Hollingshead has been having painful dreams about her daughter," she explained aloud. "They have disturbed her rest frequently tonight."

"I want Patty to come in here now!" the mother insisted. know you say that she came in here a while ago. But I want to speak to her again now."

An Awful Moment

The husband turned away, his hands clenched. . The physician spoke firmly

"Mrs. Hollingshead, why not let your daughter sleep quietly? You may she was here only a little while ago?"

"Yes—but it was quite a while ago. She came in here, didn't she, Addie?"

"Yes, dear. And she told you she wanted to go to bed and to sleep. Don't you remember?"

"But I do not remember anything and I did not hear her. I want to be sure that she has not caught cold or is not ill or anything."

Dr. Carter laid his steady hands on the chin, trembling ones.

"Dear lady," he urged, "you believe me when I say a thing—don't you?"

"Yes"

"Then you must believe me when I say that Miss Patricia is all right and would not want to be disturbed. Won't you stop asking for her, and let her sleep peacefully?"

"Yes," the sick woman assented. "But—oh, my head!"

"I will give you something to relieve your head," the doctor promised.

He prepared a hypodermik. Addie waiting on him. When it had been administered and the patient had fallen into a deep slumber, the physician beckoned the man and the girl into the hall.

"She is very ill," he announced "More ill than she has been at all. I must put a trained nurse in here"

"A trained nurse!"

Henry Hollingshead repeated the words in a tone that made the physician raise his eyebrows in surprise

"Why not?" he queried

"Because Hannah objects to a trained nurse. She loves Miss Brown, but she has always disliked nurses."

"She is too ill now to object much," the physician said. "She is in a critical condition. It is not fair to her, nor to Miss Brown, not to have a regular nurse. Miss Brown understands. I am sure."

Spoke Impulsively

Adelaide spoke impulsively "Of course, I understand I want her to have professional care. If I can't be of use here I will be glad. If not—but I will not be hurt if you send me home."

Henry Hollingshead caught her by the hand. "No, child! Stay, please! I cannot think straight now. You can. I will need you."

"Your place is here at present," Dr. Carter supplemented. "I noticed just now how Mrs. Hollingshead listened to you when you spoke of—her daughter. How did you manage to make her think that Miss Patricia had been with her" Of course, it was an inability of hers but you seemed to understand—"

"Not" Adelaide interrupted him. "It was not entirely an hallucination. Her dreams were, of course. But I had to quiet her, so I let her think that I—that I——"

NEW NOTES FOR FROCKS

—By Rita Stuyvesant—

THIS is the season when every one desires new frocks and suits, and if one must wear clothes from last Spring they may easily be freshened or brought up to date by a few simple accessories. Three-piece suits are now more fashionable than the two-piece variety, so now is the time to add one more piece to your costume.

A suit from last season may be made over into an ultra-smart costume as was a navy trikotine suit with simple two-piece skirt and flare box coat, elaborately braided in henna-colored soutache braid. To the skirt was added an overblouse of henna-colored canton crepe, plentifully beaded and trimmed with short kimono sleeves and the fashionable oval neck.

This blouse was purchased ready made, and was attached to the skirt at the hips, the skirt being cut and sewed up onto the crepe. Narrow bands of the henna crepe bound the collar and cuffs of the jacket, and the blouse formed an attractive vest at the front.

When the jacket was removed a stunning two-piece frock was seen, A narrow girdle of the material confined the fulness of the blouse a little below the waist line.

Perhaps you have one of those tan or beige twill suits that were so popular last season, and you do not like the effect of a waist and skirt when the jacket is removed. Why not try cutting the skirt off at the top, about at the hips (removing silk pockets in this way) and adding an underblouse of tobacco brown Canton crepe. This may be elaborately embroidered in tan and brown worsted or fine gold beads, and would thus make a smart frock to complete a three-piece suit.

With a gray suit you might try a blouse of periwinkle blue crepe, with gray embroidery, and a small blue hat to match. Gray pumps and hosiery and a periwinkle blue hand bag might be added to the costume.

A Hard Answer

"My husband considered a very long time before he proposed to me. He was very careful." "Ah, it's always those careful people who get taken in!"

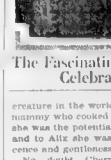
Bachelor Girl's Reflections

By HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1922, by Helen Rowland

JUDGING from the infant mortality amongst them, them, the gods must love these early-blooming Spring romances.

There appear to be two kinds of preachers: those who teach you how to live so that you will not fear death—and those who want you to live so that you will cheerfully welcome death.



Oh, miraculous youth! To be able to live on the membory of a kiss for twenty-four hours—and to warm the memory over again the next day!

The first kiss always brings a lump in a man's throat—but it's the last kiss that leaves a lump in a woman's throat.

No matter for what unconscious or unconscionable reason a woman may glance at a man, he always interprets her look as a glance of admiration.

Somehow, the smaller a man's heart the more trivial and foolish little love affairs he seems to be able to pack into it.

There are three kinds of men in the world: the kind a girl dreams of marrying; the kind her mother expects her to marry, and the kind that she finally succeeds in marrying.

A man's idea of "diplomacy" is to do as he pleases, and then stay away, until, in her anxiety to know whether he is dead or alive, a woman has completely forgotten her indignation.

The hardest words for a man to utter and the easiest for a woman to believe are—"I love you!"

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

Andrew Jackson famous general and twice President, was a follower of the doctrine which exalts the value of attending to one's own business. On one occasion James Buchanan, later himself President, diplomat, scholar and somewhat of a ladies' man, although he lived and died unmarried, brought an Englishwoman of high degree to call upon General Jackson.

Leaving the lady in the reception room below and going upstairs to the President's private quarters, Buchanan found Jackson unshaven and unkempt, dressing gown and slippers before a blazing log fire, smoking his cob pipe.

When he was told about the beautiful Englishwoman he replied that he would be delighted to meet her, and asked Buchanan to go back and tell her that the President would be down immediately.

Buchanan was terribly afraid that Jackson would not change his clothes before he made his appearance in the drawing room, and he ventured to suggest to him the propriety of his doing so.

"Buchanan," said the old warrior, rising and knocking the ashes out of his pipe, "I will tell you something that will do you good, as it doth the upright in heart, and that is that I once knew a man down in Tennessee who made a fortune by attending to his own business."

Recently at a reception a pretty girl went up to Sir James Barrie and asked for his autograph, telling him that he was her favorite author. Barrie asked her name and then said "You live with your parents, I suppose?"

"No, Sir James," she replied, "my parents are in Heaven! I live with my husband."

"Your husband, too, is in Heaven," Barrie answered.

TO KEEP THE BABY WELL

—By Brice Belden, M. D.—

NERVOUS babies are pretty sure to owe their condition to malnutrition, and the malnutrition, in turn, is usually the result of overfeeding, not of underfeeding, as one would naturally suppose. It is excess of fats and sugar in the dietary, particularly that causes mischief. Such overfeeding also causes sleeplessness and eczema, which add to the nervousness.

It is a fact that lack of water will sometimes give rise to fever in very young infants. Such infants cry, are restless, have dry skin, and suck vigorously anything within reach. The temperature falls when sufficient water is given.

During the course of measles and scarlet fever there is always a risk of ear infection. The wise physician examines the ears at regular intervals throughout such infections, in order to detect any bulging of the drum and prevent by incision of that membrane any destruction of the delicate hearing apparatus. Great damage may be done if spontaneous perforation is awaited, but to speak of unnecessary suffering.

The tendency to deliberately fatten babies requires unwarranted comment; surplus fat handicaps and invites disaster.

The reason why an underfed baby screaming from hunger is likely to develop colic is because a screaming baby swallows air and this air causes pain through overdistension of the stomach.

A great deal of effort is being expended today in the prevention of heart disease in early childhood. In order to be successful the physician must have the intelligent co-operation of parents.

Apparently innocent maladies are quite capable, frequently, of leaving a crippled heart after them. The great principle to bear in mind during any acute infection, however mild is the necessity of rest in bed until complete recovery. When a heart murmur results from tonsilitis or rheumatism the child must be kept in bed two or three months, however well he may appear to be.

HOW TO HOLD FRIENDS

BE A GOOD ONE YOURSELF

By Beatrice Fairfax

"IF you would have a friend, you must first be one," said a great thinker.

Today one of my correspondents has sent me the verses by which she has guided her life from loneliness to the richness of fine friendships.

"You often publish letters from girls who can't make friends," writes A. E. G. "I think this poem would help them as it has me."

Here it is. Its lesson is worth consideration:

"If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him. Yes—and let him know
That you love him ere life's evening.
Tinge his brow with sunset's glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

"If you hear a song that thrills you
Sung by any child of song,
Praise it. Do not let the singer
Wait deserved praise long
Why should one who thrills your heart
Lack the joy you may impart?

"If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so. Speak out frank and freely
Ere the darkness veils the land.
Should a brother workman dear
Falter for a word of cheer?

This is half of a poem which gives the simple, kindly message of frank friendliness. Strangely enough, in a world where all of us long for companionship, understanding and loyalty—many of us are afraid to offer the warmth of our own kindly affection. Most of us fear to ask for what we yearn to possess.

There's a stupid idea rampant. It is built on that old saying

"Keep him guessing"

We have a notion that folks don't value that of which they are sure. We fancy that the lure of the chase is the one thing to keep others interested. We imagine that coquetry and uncertainty stimulate interest.

But who wants to spend his life in a race after the unattainable? We work toward goals. We cannot forever chase the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. We want to get somewhere on our path of life.

And when it comes to friendship we crave the assurance of loyalty and devotion. In trouble we turn to those on whom we have learned to count. In success we want to share our joy with those of whose sympathy we are sure

All the facts of life and human experience are against the giving of prizes where no prizes are due Friendship is the reward of devotion. Most of us are lonely. Most of us are looking for the steadying, dependable, comforting devotion of understanding friendship. But we forget that it doesn't just happen—or come as the result of a mistake.

In a world where everything has to be earned, friendship most of all must be wanted, asked for, deserved and prized when it is given—for caprice and vanity cannot hold friendship. Coldness freezes it . . . To have a friend, you must indeed first be one.

A Qualification

A rather interesting answer was given to a member of a certain education committee who thought it well to visit certain schools occasionally and ask questions in the classes. Once he spoke about the late Earl of Beaconsfield, who he said, was a statesman, and then he finished up by asking: "Now can you tell me what a statesman is"

Up shot one hand. "Please, sir, a statesman is a man who makes speeches."

"Well, but there is more than that. I sometimes make speeches, but I am not a statesman."

The little hand went up again. "I know, sir; a statesman is a man who makes good speeches."

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

WOMEN! DYE THINGS NEW IN "DIAMOND DYES"

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple any woman can dye or tint her worn, shabby dresses, skirts, waists, coats, stockings, sweaters, coverings, draperies, hangings, everything, even if she has never dyed before. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—only other kind—then perfect home dyeing is sure because Diamond Dyes are guaranteed not to spot, fade, streak or run. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton or mixed goods.—Advertisement.

Stocks Rule Strong in Another Million-Share Session; Call Money 4½%

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

Not since the war boom burst have encouraging developments been more numerous than during the last week, particularly investment-wise.

A roll-call of events will prove more illuminating than generalized comment.

* * *

Every full business day last week transactions on the New York Stock Exchange exceeded 1,000,000 shares; on two days they ran beyond 1,500,000 shares.

On one day 447 separate issues were traded in, a new record.

Stock prices easily passed the previous high average level reached in May and for the whole of last year, while the bond average went to the highest point since 1918.

Brokers reported very distinct broadening of buying of stocks by the public, following the incipient interest manifested early last month, and they see signs of still greater public buying as the upward movement progresses.

Although there were unusually heavy offerings of new securities, domestic and foreign, the absorption continued quite extraordinarily well, and the interest rates allowed have been reduced instead of increased. Pacific Railway plans to refund bonds issued only last year and thus save a substantial amount of interest annually.

Practically all classes of securities from Liberty Bonds—which again reached new high quotations around one par—to choice railroad stocks of railway and industrial companies, are now attracting buyers, with every indication that public buying will generally move from the highest grade investments to issues yielding higher returns or affording speculative possibilities.

* * *

Low money rates still rule despite larger borrowings by brokers.

Bank reserves continue to show extraordinarily high at a fraction under 78 per cent., or half as large again as a year ago.

Bank clearings last month were 3¾ billions above March of last year and were the highest for any March in history with the single exception of 1920—an extraordinary showing. Incidentally, bank clearings at London have just reached the greatest volume ever attained.

The superabundance of idle funds both here and in London is driving intensely keen competition among underwriters on both sides of the Atlantic for new commitments and other big bond offerings with every prospect that this urge on find employment for the money will continue until business becomes sufficiently active to absorb very much larger accounts.

* * *

Industrially, the last week has brought further increases in steel prices; abnormally heavy ordering of cars by leading railroads; increased ordering of locomotives; reopening of a few idle plants and the re-starting of quite a number of furnaces.

Sales of copper have expanded last month's total equalling the combined sales for January and February.

Leading automobile companies are announcing increased earnings, advertising, record-breaking orders, greatly increased shipments, and important additions to their March output of cars.

Tire companies, as a corollary, are doing better and it is worth noting that crude rubber has recovered from its recent excessively low prices.

Building operations are multiplying now that the weather is favorable. New York State plans for new industrial buildings represent expenditures double those of a year ago.

Huge quantities of carpets and rugs are auction brought prices well up to expectations, notwithstanding the admitted fact that retail goods business has lately been quiet, a fact that has aroused comment in view of the encouraging developments in many basic industries.

Commercial failures are decreasing.

* * *

Washington has issued figures showing an increase of 2¼ per cent. in employment at the opening of this month, as compared with the beginning of March, and application for employment have decreased noticeably.

* * *

The government's first crop report for the year forecasts a Winter wheat yield about equal to the average of recent years.

Wheat prices have held up moderately well and corn is cheaper than it was a week ago, being, in fact, only a few cents a bushel below the quotation current at this time last year.

Food animals continue to bring satisfactory prices.

Cotton has continued to hover not far from the 18 cents mark.

* * *

The index numbers across that wholesale prices eased off a little last month, but in most lines there is very little in the price trend today to encourage continued buying off in the placing of orders, particularly in view of the resurgence of stocks on hand in many lines.

* * *

So far the nation-wide coal strike has interfered little with business, but it would be unreasonable to expect no disturbances of industry if industry should the deadlock, with its growing bitterness, continue even only a few weeks longer.

The international position has undergone no great changes. The Genoa conference is awaited with interest rather than optimism. Mexican developments, however, are most encouraging.

The principal foreign exchanges have again moved upward.

* * *

I can only repeat that I feel convinced that both bond and stock security markets should do reasonably well, although there are enough unfavorable factors, particularly in Washington and in Europe, to keep optimism within bounds.

U.S. STEEL TOOK LEAD AFTER ITS REPORT

Gains Range from Fractions to Five Points; Profit-Taking in the Last Hour

By W. H. ROSS
Financial Editor

Stocks rulled strong in New York at the close, although there were some weak spots at the end. Profit-taking was resumed in the afternoon. Steels were the late leaders, especially U. S. Steel. Rails were up as a class and this was true, of oils also. Sugars, New York transactions and some individual issues showed last hour losses.

Trading was very active, far exceeding a million share total. Mexican Petroleum was down ¾ at 131½ at the close; Studebaker was up ⅞ at 113⅝, U. S. Steel was up ⅞ at 99⅛, Baldwin up 1⅛ at 80⅜, Reading up 1⅛ at 80⅝, Baldwin 1⅞ at 136¼. Marine preferred 3⅜ at 79¼, and Royal Dutch 2 at 83½.

Buying orders accumulated in quantity over Sunday and gave the market a strong start today. The first advance was met by realization selling of a large scale. Some of this was attributed to pool operators. For a while the price movement was irregular, but before the end of the morning the advance was resumed. The U. S. Steel report showed a good increase in unfilled tonnage last month, was a strong uplifting factor. The trend was upward over noontime and in the afternoon.

More than a score of stocks sold at their highest for two or several years in the morning and this list was increased later. Alma Loco. motive, Marine preferred, Pierce Arrow common and preferred, Royal Dutch, Baldwin, Studebaker and Gulf States Steel. They gained from two to more than five points. Gulf States rising the most. U. S. Steel was up 1⅝ at 99½ in the last hour; Mexican Petroleum was up 1¾ at 133¾, at its highest while Pan-American baker ranged from 113⅝, its opening price, to 118⅝, as it was down 1⅞ at its lowest and up 1¼ at its highest. Eastman Kodak dropped 10 points to 120¾ under the 130 mark.

Call money opened at 4½ per cent. Foreign exchange rates were a little higher.

Brokers Increasing Their Office Staffs

New York, April 10.—Gathering momentum as it proceeded, the stock market gave a good exhibition for the day of the wide demand that has been gradually developing for speculative activity in every part of the market. Rails and steels participated. Buying orders on a scale reached the market today from every section of the country were received by brokers as a result of all of the realizing sales and the professionals apparently have become more strongly optimistic than the conservative side.

The commission houses have been calling back to service the men who were laid off in the dull period in the latter part of last year and are building up their clerical facilities to handle an ever-increasing volume of business.

The March statement of the U. S. Steel Corporation reporting an increase of 853 979 in unfilled tonnage, had favorable effect upon the whole speculative list, and after a sluggish start, took a position of leadership and sold above 99 and a new high price for the year. On reports from Washington that the Bethlehem Steel Company had won its appeal in a competition suit against the government, the common stock advanced several points and the "B" issue crossed 40 for the first time this year, 25 points from the year's low.

Activity in the Market street group was featured by a six-point rise in Market Street Railway first. While $35,000,000 has been proposed for the price of the railroad lines in San Francisco, it was said that this would serve as a basis for negotiations for a higher figure.

EUROPE REALLY CONFERENCED TO DEATH

Evans Expresses Some Skepticism Regarding Results of Genoa Meeting

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, April 10.—The Genoa conference is now organizing and when representatives of the great powers of Europe get together one expects some effect on the politics or the finances of the world or both, and we all may be expected to hold our breaths. Please consider, therefore, that Chicago is holding its breath, though not to the extent of ceasing to breathe altogether.

Ask a person deeply versed in economic subjects what the Genoa conference is going to accomplish and he looks a bit silly, or, to speak more respectfully, blank. He would to pierce the clouds and see what there is back there but he cannot see them. He has heard the expression "stabilizing the exchanges," floating about the world, but he does not know what that means.

STABILIZE THEMSELVES.

Exchanges stabilize themselves, and when the money of one foreign country is on a par with the gold standard of the world in the ratio of 75 to 1, he cannot see what can be done by an act of Genoa to help with the big money power left out in the ordinary course of business little discrepancies or additions as between the various nations of the world are easily remedied, but this is not a staple cause. There are enormous debts and deficits. The common thing to right a bad condition of finances is to pay the debt or repudiate it. The conference in this gathering seem to think that the finances of the world can be "fixed up" in some mysterious way. If they find the right device and set us all to rights, the world will exclaim "here is another miracle."

TOO MANY CONFERENCES.

The fact is Europe has been conferenced to death. We have had not only the long and high-tone gathering of the political saints that framed the Versailles treaty, but we have had conference after conference, various convenient and comfortable points in Europe to readjust representation and discuss all sorts of political and economic subjects, and we have had frequent appeals to the gold standard, now kept in a cabinet as a curiosity.

It is probably that Europe could have some of the conferences like those Napoleon used to hold with his marshals, when all the work had been hearded against one of his grand coups, the world's remark: "Gentlemen, we march tomorrow."

TEST EDITOR'S ANSWERS TO ANXIOUS

Misunderstandings Cleared Up, and Some Readers Are Reassured

BY THE TEST EDITOR.

One week ago today the "story" accompanying Test Drawing No. 29 began with the following paragraph:

Today's List of Titles in the Boston American's $5,000 Famous Titles Test is somewhat of a novelty in that, with three exceptions, the titles are one-word affairs. It will be interesting to observe the success of contestants with a List of Titles constructed on simple

Didn't everybody understand by that that reference was made ONLY to the List of Titles of last Monday, the list accompanying Test Drawing No. 28?

Apparently not, for the Test Editor is in receipt of the following inquiry from a reader in West Newton street, Boston:

Cornier Editor:

You say that with the exception of three TITLE THEMES PAIR are "one-word" affairs. Does that mean that "The Raven," "The Daisy," etc., would be called two words?

MRS. F. A. B.

The statement was, as you will note above, that the List of Titles behind the Test Drawing in question was made up (with three exceptions) of titles which consist of but one word. Reference to any other drawing, or to any other day of the Test, was not made or intended.

Dear Test Editor:

In Drawing No. 28 there appears to be a hidden picture. Are these hidden things permissible? Or do I mistake the folds of the dress of the apparition for an old lady?

Stoneham. C. V. B.

There are no hidden pictures.

Dear Sir:

Having lost several of the Test Drawings, I would like to know if you will send me all of them up to date, beginning with No. 17. Enclosed please find stamps for delivery of the same.

South Boston. Hazel.

The first 22 drawings will be sent to any contestant who sends me a large self-addressed envelope. I have a limited supply of the subsequent pictures up to date and these are for sale at five cents each; three cents for the picture and two for postage.

FOLLOW THE LIST.

Dear Sir:

I would like to know if it is correct to print the titles in capital letters under each picture. I have done it so far and would like your advice about it before I go any further.

Thomaston. A. M. M.

Use capital letters whenever and wherever they are used in the List of Titles.

Test Editor:—

I am pasting the pictures into a book, also the printed titles from the List. Is it necessary to write my name and address under each picture, arranged in this way? If my name and address could be written under just the first one it would save a lot of unnecessary work and would look neater. The pictures cannot get lost or misplaced this way arranged in numerical order, consequently I do not see the necessity of the name and address under every picture.

Lancaster N. J. C.

Your attention is directed to the seventh paragraph of the Rules.

Dear Test Editor:—

Your artist must belong to that group of Hindu magicians who can take a rope and throw it up in the air and have it remain suspended there. In Test Drawing No. 10 he takes the forward sail and makes it stand erect, with nothing supporting it in that position. Is it allowable to ask how this is done?

Leominster. E. M.

There are no Hindus in Saco; all he uses is pen and ink.

NOTHING CONCEALED.

Dear Test Editor:

Please inform me if there are two different persons in No. 28, or is it only a shadow?

Winthrop. E. L. G.

There are no concealed pictures. No. 28 tells you the same story it tells every other contestant, and the same story it tells me.

Dear Sir:

Hasn't the artist "slipped" on No. 25? You have said that no obsolete definitions would be used. If you will look up the title which I feel sure you have used to fit No. 25 I think you will find "obs" written after it in the dictionary. No other title in the list comes anywhere near fitting it.

Fall River. F. J.

One title in that List fits that picture better than any other title in the list. That title is the Correct Title. The obsolete is banned.

Correct Title Here

One of these titles fits Famous Titles Test Drawing No. 35 better than any other title in the list. That title is the Correct Title. Write it on appointed line. A List of Titles will be printed daily throughout the Test.

When the Moth Becomes a Butterfly

Playing the quaint little Moth who eclipses the set that has snubbed her, when she suddenly turns into a gorgeous butterfly.

An up-to-the-minute satire on shams of society — and a Quaker girl whose natural winsomeness and beauty ride her rivals to a fall —her beauty formula consisting of nature's cosmetics.

E. A. Filene Makes Valuable Suggestion for Building Up the Merchant Marine

Mr. Edward A. Filene, the Boston merchant and director of the International Chamber of Commerce, addressing the National Merchant Marine Association some time ago, suggested the building up of the Merchant Marine by inducing Americans to travel by cutting rates and changing accommodations so as to enable large numbers to take vacations in Europe at nominal cost. Mr. Filene said:

I believe that hundreds of thousands of Americans would spend their vacations in Europe if the trip were brought within their means. I am told that such ships as the George Washington carried during the war a number of soldiers more than double their ordinary passenger-carrying capacity, and that a ship with nominal accommodations for seventy-five first cabin and forty-five second cabin passengers carried from 800 to 900 troops.

I am further informed that subsistence costs $1.75 per day for first-class passengers and that it cost only 75 cents per day for troops during the war. The facilities which our boys found good enough during the war are good enough for us in peace.

I want to ask the shipowners whether it is not to their advantage to take shiploads of young men to Europe in much the same fashion as they took soldiers to France during the war, and whether the cost of a vacation in Europe could not be made to compare with a vacation here?

I want to ask whether small profits made from a very large number of passengers carried on the transport plan would not compare favorably with larger profits from a smaller number of passengers carried in the regular way?

This idea of Mr. Filene is a good one, and ought to bear fruit. First of all, one of the most important things for the population of any nation is travel. The curse of the past has been provincialism.

In former times people spent their whole lives in their native village or province. Their views became narrow, their religion became hard and their politics became contentious.

Their principal feeling toward other communities was that of hate and suspicion, because as a rule we do not like what we do not understand.

Travel today is more or less a luxury. It takes money and it takes leisure, and only a small class of the population possesses these things.

That nation would display true vision which would have sense enough to enable its poorer people to travel also.

Travel is not mere vagabondage—it is education.

And it is the most valuable kind of education, because it enlarges one's ideas and improves the quality of his tolerance.

There ought to be, going to Europe every Summer, ships which are as American as American railroad trains. That is to say, ships of just one class, democratic ships, ships that carpenters, school teachers, college boys, stenographers and clerks could ride in it at least as comfortably as they can ride in the subway.

There is no reason why good and wholesome food and sanitary accommodations could not be provided for plain, common people at a very low cost, so that the girl who sells white goods in the department store in Chicago or the farmer's boy in Kansas who has saved up a few hundred dollars could go abroad and see something.

The trouble with our industrial civilization is that it requires so much capital and equipment that it becomes static. There ought to be some way to promote a free movement of the general masses.

What every mind needs is outlook.

A good many of us are like Mysie Monk, who, when they took her at the age of sixty (for the first time in her life) to the top of Milmannoch Hill, exclaimed, as she looked around her in amaze, "Eh, sirs; it's a lairge place, the world, when you see it all!"

Those "Split Contracts"

Mayor Curley Very Properly Is Making Special Efforts to Stop Graft in Awards

It is with great pleasure that we call public attention to the fact that Mayor Curley is making a special effort to stop the practice of awarding what is known as "split contracts."

In order to avoid graft in the giving of contracts, the law provides that all contracts over $1,000, we believe, shall be awarded only to the lowest bidder after bids have been called for by advertising. In order to avoid this law, and generally for the purpose of graft, there grew up a practice of splitting the contract. They divided the work up into as many parts as was necessary in order to get each part under the $1,000 limit so that competitive bidding after advertising would not be necessary.

The failure of advertising for bids is rarely ever justified, and the split which may be occasionally suffered by not bidding does not offset the damage that is done by the suspicion and lack of confidence created when bids are not advertised and contracts are not awarded on competitive bids.

A State University

Investigation as to Its Need Should Be Made at Once

A bill is pending for an inquiry into the necessity of establishing a State university. Those behind the bill say that the present universities and colleges, numerous as they are in Massachusetts, are not adequate to supply the demand for college education in the Commonwealth.

If this is so in the old Bay State, it will astonish the country. We want to learn the truth as quickly as we can and to correct the fault as quickly and as quietly as we can. The State universities of the West have become giant institutions beside our biggest private colleges like Harvard.

As the world grows more enlightened, more and more of our people will want to go to college, and as the women assume, more and more, equal positions with men, the demand for a college education by them will certainly overtax any facilities we now have.

We hope that the investigation will be made at once.

Somebody's Birthday

Copyright, 1922, by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.

IF today is your birthday you are endowed by nature with great possibilities for good and for evil and whether you become famous or infamous will be determined only by your own choice of the opportunities which fate lays before you, but at any rate you, whether saint or sinner, will achieve no little distinction during your lifetime.

Your stars show that you were born with an intense interest in the affairs of others. At times you are affectionate and sympathetic; at other times coldly curious and critical, but always interested. You have in your nature something of the charity of Robin Hood who robbed the rich and helped the poor.

Your mind is energetic rather than profound, although when forcibly taken out of your active life you are capable of deep philosophic reflection and dreaming, a truly poetic kind.

You have a forceful and resourceful love nature. There are times when you feel you just must have a listener. Do not be surprised if the casual visitors do not take you seriously.

Today is unfortunate and positively dangerous for all persons who might come in contact with electric currents. Your next year will see you through a domestic crisis. Avoid hasty decisions after petty quarrels.

A child born today will be erratic and untruthful unless raised with extraordinary sympathetic care.

Famous persons born today—
Leonidas Polk—Bishop of New York.
Louise Chandler Moulton—Novelist and poet.
Joseph Pulitzer—Journalist.
Fanny Davenport—Actress.
General Booth — Salvation Army.

Bidding in Auction Bridge

By S. S. Carvalho.

Author of "Complete Auction Bridge for 1922."

ARTICLE I.

The Greater Importance of Bidding

IN Auction Bridge the cards represent 60 per cent. of the game, bidding 30 per cent. and play 10 per cent. This means that correct bidding is three times as important as the play. If you bid more tricks than you can possibly make the most brilliant play in the world will not win your contract.

There are not many conventions in bidding, but what there are should be carefully studied and rigorously observed. Convention is a very comprehensive term, used more by English writers than by those in this country. This excellent definition is given by an English authority.

"Rules in Bridge which have emerged by degrees from the welter of all sorts of conflicting ideas, in the course of which the pros and cons of each of them have been intelligently considered and warmly debated by persons best qualified to judge of their merits."

There are five essential conventions, the observance of which is absolutely necessary. In everyday games you will find some players who are not familiar with them. As it is within the bounds of Bridge Etiquette to inform the table before the game begins what conventions you use, you may with benefit clip out the following and read them to the table when occasion demands.

An Initial One No Trump bid must be a hand a Queen's strength better than the average in high cards, with three suits guarded.

An Initial One Major Suit bid must have length and strength, with four sure tricks for attack, or two sure tricks for defence or support.

An Initial One Minor Suit bid must have as a minimum two tricks in the suit named. It is informative only, and the bidder does not desire to play it through.

Doubling an Initial One Major Suit bid tells the partner the Doubler is hopelessly weak in that suit, but otherwise has a good No Trump hand.

Doubling an Initial One No Trump bid tells the partner the Doubler has a Two No Trump, and leaves action to him.

With these five conventions observed, it is amazing how much better the game will proceed. Do not forget that the whole structure rests on the Initial Bids. They give information that forms the plan of campaign. Never deceive your partner by violating the conventions governing them. He is entitled to know the true strength of your hand. Never misinform him.

BAD GRAMMAR PROVES NO BAR TO BUSINESS SUCCESS

A BIG steel contractor, famous in his own field, but not much burdened with "learnin'," has started a new discussion of an old topic.

"Did you build this theatre in a haphazard manner?" asked the district attorney in questioning a steel contractor in the hearing over the collapse of the American Theatre in Brooklyn, when seven persons were killed.

"Yes," answered the contractor.

It later developed that he thought "haphazard" meant "all right."

Now, then, how do men with so little education rise to eminence?

The question, with variations, is being widely discussed.

"What makes the real or best foundation for success in life?"

Every man who ever rose to fame and old age has given a different recipe.

Do men who rise to great heights in spite of a handicap of ignorance stand a greater chance to fall from those heights than men of intellect?

Would men who become great without education become greater with the advantage of college training?

Is higher education an actual handicap to some persons?

Big men in all walks of life seem to spring almost equally from the learned and the unlearned classes.

Big men with brains go tobogganing from their pinnacles the same as men of meager education.

Men profoundly ignorant of common forms of grammatical usage live in honor and die revered, and yet memory of them often brings you back only to some qualnt quotation or mannerism.

How to Keep Well at 60

LONDON, April 10.—Who wants to be a centenarian? The objective is opened to those who seek by Dr. A. Lapthorn Smith, a Harley street consultant.

He has written a book on "How to Be Useful and Happy From Sixty to Ninety," and in his preface adds the wish that his advice may enable his readers to reach a hundred.

Here are some of his precepts:

If you want to keep young, keep in with young people.

Cut down the amount of food, three meals are better than four and two much better than three.

Increase the amount of water. Neither a city nor a citizen can run a drainage system without a waterworks.

Never exceed one ounce of tobacco a week. Never drink alcohol except at meals or before 6 p. m. and always well diluted with water.

If, when you reach sixty, you have a beard three feet long, cut it off gradually.

Do not speculate at sixty. You may lose your sleep as well as your money.

If you have a big business, get some young horses to pull the wagon, but don't get off the wagon.

People from sixty to ninety should be excused from going to funerals. The funeral of your friend is sometimes followed by your own.

Microbes are everywhere, and are looking for people with a poor circulation. A fatty heart is a weak heart. Keep thin. They are looking for pale people. Keep rosy.

Dr. Lapthorn Smith gives a picture of his ideal death. It is this:—"I know of no happier death than that of a doctor, still in harness at ninety, dying in his chair just after saying good-bye to his last patient."

Smiles

WHY DOUBT IT?

"Do you think there is any such thing as a sixth sense?"

"Sure. Every woman has it when her husband tells her he has kept out late at night."

A BLESSING OUR MINDS CAN'T BE READ

By Winifred Black

WHAT interesting things you see in the streets if you only walk slowly enough and keep your eyes open.

Yesterday there had been a shower and the streets were wet and I went down into the old part of the town where there are holes in the pavement, and in one of the holes there was a darling puddle—oh, almost three feet long and at least seven delicious inches deep.

You could see the sky in it—blue and white and very beautiful.

Two little boys found the puddle—leave it to them. And when they had found it, you couldn't see the sky in it any longer—not an inch, not even a suspicion of it.

Into the puddle they went—shoes and stockings and fresh suits and all—splash—dash—laugh—shout.

Dear me, what fun it is to be seven years old and to come out after a shower and find a perfectly good puddle all ready for a wading!

A Strange Language

A man who was standing on the sidewalk waiting for someone saw the boys.

"Kids," he shouted, "get out of that puddle, get out, I tell you. Why, you'll get your feet wet."

And the "kids" stood still and stared at him in dumb amazement.

Get their feet wet! Why, what did he think they were trying to do, keep them dry? And what affair was it of his? Rather cool of him, a perfect stranger, to begin to worry about their feet.

And the man stood and gazed at them reproachfully—and the children stood and stared at him in amazement—and I thought:

"What a strange language it is we speak, each to the other, we human beings."

The man was a good creature—he felt sorry for the boys' mothers at home. He knew how mothers feel about wet feet and spotted suits and things.

He didn't think of the boys at all, or if he did he didn't know how to make them listen to him.

Our Odd Ways

I remember once when I was a little girl, we had a bazaar—all the little girls in the neighborhood. And we had a basement and old dressing-room curtains and the sewing room tables, and we sold fancy work and candy and ice cream.

I had charge of the ice cream booth and did the ordering—and I ordered eight quarts of chocolate ice cream and not another flavor.

And I was amazed and rather indignant when people insisted on ordering peach or strawberry, or even vanilla—they seemed to go out of their way to think up kinds of ice cream I'd never even thought of.

You see, I liked chocolate myself.

Now, if the man had told the boys that that was his puddle and that he didn't allow boys to wade in it unless they took their shoes off, they would have thought of him as a reasonable being, though, perhaps, but reasonable. The man, however—oh, he just said what he'd heard his wife say or his mother, and let it go at that. I'm afraid he'd never do for a diplomat.

What a blessing it is that we can't read each other's minds.

To the Editor

Pledges Violated

Editor Boston American:

The revision of the treaty of Sevres in favor of the Turks just made by the Allied Ministers in conference at Paris, and the violation of the solemn pledges made to the Armenian people during the war and since the armistice, is so flagrant a breach of international honor as to necessitate protest from America. This, if we may judge from the opinion voiced in the press, is the feeling of the whole country.

The action of the Allied Ministers involves more than a betrayal of a particular people. It amounts flatly to a repudiation of obligations and engagements made with them upon her entrance into the war. Such gross disregard of elementary justice, unless in some degree righted, cannot fail to rankle in the heart of humanity and to lead to serious estrangements between peoples and in the end to further conflicts.

America will be doing no more than the world expects, and her own honor demands if she informs the Allied powers that the betrayal of the Armenian people was not one of the objects for which she sent her men overseas.

G. H. PAPAZIAN,
Secretary Armenian National Union of America.

SEEING IT THROUGH COMIC EYES

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

BLESSED be humor and humorists!

If the quality of humor is a saving grace in all of us, the genuine and successful humorist deserves high rank among at least the life savers of his time.

Any man should be happy who can raise a laugh where only a smile sprouted before. He ought to count himself blessed who can send even a momentary shaft of sunshine through what the poets of gloom like to call a vale of tears.

What has even more lasting value than the laugh or smile which the wit and humorist may start, is the stimulus to thought which your real wit and humorist provides.

Ultra-Highbrows

Your ultra-highbrow may scorn, or merely affect to despise, the funny pages and the comic sections of our papers, but the people in the mass know why they like this feature of the modern journal.

They want to smile and grin and laugh and roar; but also they appreciate the pellets of predigested worldly wisdom which these tabloid cleverists habitually offer.

Of course, there are in our papers, as on the stage and in life, mere slapstick farceurs who do not aspire beyond that catastrophic fun, which wins a laugh from you because something unpleasant has happened to someone else; as for instance, if a ton of brick falls upon a gawky wooer; or if Little Willie, in the best of sashes, falls in the fire and turns to ashes.

But there are others, whose humor is flavored, sometimes pointedly and again not so obviously, with keen satire and with philosophic comment upon passing events and upon the permanent foibles and the fixed frailties of our human nature.

Here, for instance, comes Frederick B. Opper, rightly called Dean of Comic Artists, and jiggles his kaleidoscope so that we may more clearly see evasive truth through his "funny" eyes.

In a recent number of Circulation" he tells of a little game of make-believe that he sometimes plays for his own diversion. When he is walking about, he says that the people whom he sees around him will be the incidents in the great future that is coming.

So he "plays" that he is actually looking at the Ancients! And he pretends to be deeply interested in their curious costumes and in hearing their strange speech.

Then he tries to project himself into the dim future and imagine that he himself is the man of three or four thousand years from now, come back to be a witness of this long gone time.

Then the mood passes, and he again becomes one of today's "Ancients" himself!

Isn't that a fascinating suggestion? Try the game yourself. You will find it quite playable—with the aid of your imagination and a jiggle of your kaleidoscope.

Twist of Wrist

With a twist of the wrist, you turn your kaleidoscope and your whole field of vision suddenly changes! With a clever turn of line and thought the comic artist gives you an unusual "slant" on life, and, humorously or wittily, you are made to see it for the moment from a strange angle.

As you "get the point," you not only laugh, but you learn. The laugh in itself is worth while, and what you learn is so much of value added by the perhaps unconscious comic teacher.

The professional humorist is only each of us, with the gift of seeing things through comic eyes, particularly developed.

All of us have at least the capacity of kaleidoscopic vision.

You can amuse yourself by a landscape, if you cock your head to one side, or if you get the effect of standing on your head by looking at the view through your legs. Nature responds to your effort to get new angles on her varied loveliness.

So human nature and all of life show new interest, if not always new beauty, when seen through comic eyes.

Cultivate in yourself the sense of the comic and of comic appreciation. You will win a wholesome corrective. You can frequently change your perspective.

You may even move towards happier inward health, by learning to laugh at yourself.
